Welfare added to special session

JEFFERSON CITY, Mo. (AP) — Gov. Christopher S. Bond and legislative leaders have agreed to add a welfare bill to the governor's call for a special legislative session beginning Monday.

The governor met with key legislators Tuesday in what Bond termed a "friendly session."

Sen. William J. Cason, D-Clinton, will sponsor another measure to correct an oversight that the attorney general says will cause Aid to Dependent Children to be cut by $5.

A House bill raised the state pension for the blind from $100 to $110 a month and another House bill increased the Aid to Depdendent Children payments by $5. Both bills took effect Oct. 1.

There are about 74,000 families receiving Aid to Dependent Children payments and 210 persons receiving the pension for the blind.

The attorney general has ruled a Senate bill covering statutes on the blind pension and ADC, but passed to provide welfare payments in other categories, will take precedence because it has a later effective date of Jan. 1.

Therefore, the attorney general said, the payments in effect before Oct. 1 must be paid after Jan. 1. Cason's bill will raise the payments to match the new House bills.

Bond told the legislators he would not speak to a joint session because of space problems, but will issue a written statement.

House Speaker Richard J. Rabbitt, D-St. Louis, said he plans to convene the 162 House members in the House lounge and then recess for committee meetings. There will be one less House member than normal until an election produces a replacement for Republican Ronald Belt of Macon, who was named a circuit court judge.

The House chambers, undergoing renovation, won't be ready for another week.

The governor told the legislators he would make himself available to them more this session, setting aside two hours a day for legislative matters.

Bond and the legislators discussed the other special session items without going into specifics, a governor's aide said. Bond called the special session to consider reorganization of state government, lowering of the speed limit, expanding the merit system and enacting campaign disclosure laws.

Fire destroys Barnett home

Fire destroyed the Joe Barnett home, 838 Wayne St., following an explosion in the home's furnace at 8:43 p.m. Tuesday.

The small frame home was engulfed in flames by the time firemen arrived.

The Barnetts were at a coin laundry at the time of the fire and lost all their possessions. Neighbors told firemen they heard a loud explosion just before seeing the house burst into flames.

The explosion blew out the east wall of the house and forced the base of the other walls outward.

The house was valued at about $14,000.

The Jerry Phillips home next door was also damaged by the fire. The heat from the Barnett house at one point set the Phillips house on fire, but firemen were able to extinguish the flames.

A fireman was involved in a two- car accident at the intersection of East Malone Avenue and Pine Street while en route to the fire.

Volunteer fireman Dennis Overbey, 19, of 534 Carroll St. was westbound on Malone when he struck a car driven by John William Graham Jr., 16, of 614 Dorothy St. which was pulling onto Malone from the northbound lane of Pine.

Graham and his brother Robert, 14, were treated for possible concussions at Missouri Delta Community Hospital and released. Overbey was not injured.

The accident occurred only few feet from the spot where Overbey's father, Volunteer Fire Capt. Leonard Overbey, was killed in June. The elder Overbey was killed in a two- car accident and is believed to have been en route to pick up another fireman to take to a fire.

Firemen are asking that anyone who finds a fireman's helmet to return it to the department. One of the firemen lost the helmet on Murray Lane near the Safeway store while riding on the back of the fire truck to the fire at the Barnett house.

Bluff OKs $3 million for Rowe

POPLAR BLUFF, Mo. (AP) — A $3 million bond issue to finance expansion at the Rowe Furniture Corp., plant here met with overwhelming voter approval in a special referendum Tuesday.

About 90 per cent of those casting ballots approved the measure with 589 voting in favor and 77 against. The proposition needed a two-thirds majority for passage.

Rowe plant president Gerald Birnbach told the Chamber of Commerce Tuesday the expansion could mean an additional 300 jobs for the city.

Rowe currently employs about 350 workers in the Poplar Bluff area. The bonds would not require a tax increase and would be retired by the company as it leased the facility.

SeMo educators hear commissioner, legislators

HOWARDVILLE — Teachers, students, school administrators, school board members and interested citizens from 15 Southeast Missouri counties gathered Tuesday at the New Madrid County R-1 Vocational Technical Skills Center for a State Department of Education regional conference.

One of 11 such meetings throughout the state involving about 5,000 persons, the conference was designed to offer the public an opportunity to express views and recommendations for future educational planning and improvements for quality education.

Topics discussed in the day- long session were school classification and accreditation, new high school graduation requirements, greater emphasis on special education, vocation educational and a new assessment program being developed by the State Department of Education for systematically measuring the total development of pupils.

Dr. Arthur L.Mallory, state commissioner of education, attended the meeting and stated at a news conference:

"The matter of quality education is not the same everywhere. I think part of quality and part of excellence is in the individual who wants to seek it."

Others responsible, he said, are the teachers, school board, State Board of Education and the General Assembly.

"We all share the responsibility to deal with the matter of quality education, but I think the way you get at it is to go to the people and earnestly seek their answer to the question: 'What do you want for your kids?' If you get an answer to that and put some of the answer into effect, I think you are doing what you want. You are getting your quality.

"I honestly feel there is no way to run the schools in the state of Missouri at the local or state level without going to the people for their input -- so education can reflect the wishes and needs of the people of Missouri.

"I think it is rather interesting we are getting the same general discussion in southwest Missouri and in northeast Missouri as we got in Kansas City and St. Louis.

Sheriff enroute to Chicago

Scott County Sheriff John Dennis and a witness were enroute today to Chicago to testify at the extradition hearing of James (Peterboy) Harrington, accused of the murder of Kenny Ellison on Sept. 20, 1971 in the Sunset addition.

Prosecuting Attorney Jim Moore said Harrington's defense is based on the claim that he was not in Sikeston at the time Ellison was murdered.

The hearing is scheduled at 10:30 a.m. Tuesday in Chicago.

If extradition is granted, Dennis said he would bring Harrington back with him.

Madrid seeks loan for coal conversion

NEW MADRID — The city of New Madrid is attempting to secure a $20 million Farmers Home Administration loan to build a processing plant that would convert coal to synthetic natural gas, a spokesman for the Missouri Bootheel Regional Planning Commission said Tuesday.

Paul Foster, the commission's program coordinator, said the city, represented by the St. Jude Industrial Park board of directors, filed a "preliminary application" with FHA earlier this month, "and we are expecting a reply momentarily."

The FHA will study the preliminary application to determine whether building the gas plant is feasible, Foster said. Even if the application is approved immediately, it would be nearly three years before the plant would be operational, he said.

The gas plant would be built in the 4,000-acre industrial park just south of New Madrid.

The purpose of the plant, Foster said, would be to produce gas to fuel the industrial park's factories.

The plant's largest customer would be the aluminum mill, which occupies about 1,300 acres in the industrial park, Foster said. Noranda would use about 3.4 million cubic feet of gas per day, "which would mean that some two million

Burglars steal car, church bus to haul safe

Burglars used a stolen car and church bus to carry off a safe from Bridger Plumbing & Heating Co., 607 Davis Blvd.

The burglars broke into the Bridger office through a back door sometime during the night. The burglars, believed to number at least three, loaded the safe into the back seat of a car owned by Tim Ludwig, 819 Davis Blvd. The car was taken from the parking lot of the apartment building in which Ludwig lives.

The safe contained abstracts and business contracts, according to police.

The car was found about 6:40 a.m. today in the parking lot of the Charcoal House Trailer Courts on Highway 61 North.

The thieves apparently abandoned the car and stole a red and white bus from First Church of the Nazarene on highway 61 North, according to police.

The church was broken into and $1 in change was taken. Drawers were ransacked in the office, police said, but the thieves passed up stamps, an adding machine, tape recorder and typewriter.

Police said the burglars had a large dog with them at the Bridger office and the church.

C'ville votes tax hike, bond issue

CARUTHERSVILLE — Caruthersville voters Tuesday gave their overwhelming approval to a one- cent city sales tax and a $400,000 bond proposal.

The sales tax issue carried by a 79 per cent majority while the bond issue was approved by 78 per cent of the voters.

The city sales tax received 668 votes in its favor and 176 against the issue. In the bond vote, 656 were in favor and 185 against the proposal.

The city will use the revenue taken in from the city sales tax to pay for needed capital improvements within the city; namely the sewer system and lagoon.

An ordinance has already been adopted by the city stating that the tax funds will be used for sewer work first, lagoon work second and the balance for other capital improvements.

City Administrator James Bell reported today that the voter turnout was "incredible", considering the bad weather.

DON'T GO BLIND

It is not too early to start sounding warnings that the event of the "greatest show on earth" to be coming soon, will bring with it certain serious dangers. We speak of the forthcoming spectacular "Comet Kohoutek," due to appear to the naked eye around December first, and to remain visible until the end of January. The new comet, which has already "arrived" for those who have access to telescopes, will be the most dramatic heavenly display since the famous Halley's comet, which last appeared for earth people in 1910.

Comet Kohoutek became first known to us last March when Dr. Lubos Kohoutek, a Czechoslovakian astronomer working at the Hamburg Observatory in Wast Germany, found a bright spot on his photographic plates where nothing had appeared before. Watching the tiny glob of light grow on his telescope day by day, Kohoutek recognized that an enormous comet was hurtling towards our solar system at a speed of better than 100,000 miles an hour. Further calculations showed that should the big comet hit the earth, it would wipe out a city larger than Los Angeles and blast a crater more than 50 miles in diameter.

There will be no danger of collision, however; at the nearest point of approach, around the middle of January, Comet Kohoutek, (named for its discoverer) will be some 75 million miles from earth. Nevertheless, in terms of stellar distances, that is "close." Furthermore, as it zips around the sun like a boomerang and heads back out into space, Comet Kohoutek will be brighter than any star in our heavens, except for the sun. Furthermore, it will have a bright blue and yellow "tail" trailing behind.

What is the danger? Simply this: in late December, when the Comet will be at it's brightest during late afternoon hours, it will be very close to the sun. There is the danger that some people, especially small children, may be tempted to turn their telescopes or binoculars to take a look directly at the sun itself. If one should do that, however, there is the grave danger that the sun will literally burn a hole in the retina of the eye, causing a permanent blind spot.

So, pass the word: enjoy the "greatest show on earth" as Comet Kohoutek pays us a visit, and watch for it in the skies; but never, never look directly the sun.

ALL IN THE GAME?

The late Walter Winchell may have been right when he observed that "the only bad part of being a good sport is that you have to lose to prove it."

Coach George Allen of the Washington Redskins, on the other hand, apparently is out to prove that football and other teams don't have to win or lose to prove they are bad sports. All they have to do is start a fight.

In a recent elevised interview, following a Redskins — St. Louis Cardinals game marred by a free-wheeling brawl Allen expounded his win- at - all - costs philosophy: "I loved the fight. I loved the fight ... and if we didn't go out there and fight I'd be worried. So what if it's a $250 fine, or whatever it is, that's nothing ... the guys who sit on the bench, they're the losers."

Allen, highly successful in the won-lost column, added that when he coached the Los Angeles Rams, "I encouraged a free-for-all ... just to get 'em all together, unless you have that, you aren't going to be a winner. It's all part of winning."

We wager — and we hope — that thousands of other coaches across the country disagree: encouraging fights between competing athletes is not "all part of winning." Surely it is a bankrupt coach who must resort to such tactics to motivate his players.

Brawling by players or fans is not good for sports and most certainly it is not good for society. Scholars tell us that Rome, shortly before its fall, was characterized by the brutalization of its athletic contests. George Allen, and those of like mind, would do well to remember that lesson from history.

THE FALLICIES WE LIBE BY

That We Understand High Prices & High Taxes

A lot of people have an explanation for continuously higher prices and taxes.

But to really understand, says the American Economic Foundation, we must begin with the overwhelming fact that most of the cost of everything is payments for working. There are many types of payments for working, but for convenience let's lump them under PFW.

This is one of those truths which must be accepted without detailed evidence because nothing else could be true. For example, if a billion gallons of rain falls on a given watershed, we know that practically all of it will sooner or later wind up in a given body of water. We know this because, aside from evaporation, there is no other place for it to go.

Similarly, if a billion dollars is spent, regardless of how, practically all of it will wind up as PFW. There is no other place for it to go.

Because this is automatic, our constantly higher PFW, without correspondingly higher productivity, automatically causes higher prices and taxes. There is no stopping it because most of the people doing the work are organized in groups with monopolistic power to get more without doing more work.

By strikes (or "job actions") private and public workers can deprive the economy of essential goods and services. This pressure being irresistible, the PFW rises and enverything, including the cost of government, costs more. This means that new inflationary money money must be pumped into the systems. Two questions arise: 1) Where does this inflationary money come from? and 2) Why?

Where? It comes from increased public debt.

Why? Because if it were not available the increased PFW could not be paid, and massive unemployment would result. This could not be permitted because, by law, the government is committed to full employment (which is considered to be about 95% of the work force).

So, the average PFW in private employment spiraled steadily upward from $4,594 in 1958 to $7,564 in 1970. In government employment it rose from $4,499 to $7,965, according to the US Office of Business Economics. This is the inexorable working of an inexorable truth.

But knowing the truth and doing something about it are two different things.

What are the choices?

We can continue to try to keep it in bounds with loose wage and price controls, and slow down the drift toward ruinous inflation.

We can try (and certainly fail) to enforce tough rigid controls.

We could (but we won't) change the labor laws.

Or, we can launch an enormous adult educational program which could conceivably stimulate the intelligent voluntary self-restraint that is the only answer to stable prices in a full-employment economy when monopolistic groups substantially control their PFW.

A handbook for such an educational effort, "How We Live," is available from the American Economic Foundation, 51 E. 42nd St., NYC, 10017 for $1.00.

SELF-DECEPTION, OR 'THE B. S. FACTOR'

Maybe the reason that Uncle Sam has such a long beard is that when he gets up in the morning he can't stand to look himself in the face and turns the mirror to the wall instead of shaving.

You might do that, too, if you had to worry about Watergate, inflation, energy crises, pollution, Vietnam, drugs, the astronauts and Archie Bunker. Come to think of it, you do have to worry about them.

Which may explain why so many of us —editorial writers most definitely included — resort to talking, writing, acting and generally beating around the bush. The bush being, we have a lot of problems and what are we going to do about them?

Arthur Herzog, sometime journalist and fulltime student of American society, says in his new book, "The B.S. Factor — the theory and technique of faking it in America," that what we are doing is talking ourselves out of our troubles.

At least we are trying to talk ourselves out of them, operating more or less on the theory that a bunch of garbage by any other name might smell a little sweeter.

Herzog has compiled an impressive list of ways in which we refuse to call a spade a spade (or a war a war, or a toilet a toilet).

One of the tendencies he deplores in American life is the implicit blessing people bestow on statements by putting them in quotation marks but (sorry, Arthur) as he says in his book:

"Language becomes a way of adjusting to reality. That reality might be deficient — that is, it might fail to satisfy — but even so the language would tend to adjust. There might be dysfunctions which the language would work to cover up, conceal, in order to avoid disequilibrium, or at least the consciousness of it. The Fake Factor would be a way of hiding our imperfections from ourselves."

Thus, Herzog decries both "Americant," the blind patriotism of those who can find nothing wrong with this country, and "Amerikant," the blind cynicism of those who can find nothing right with it.

He points out our nagging tendency to use such vacant phrases as "genuine leatherette" and "medium premium gasoline."

He gags at the self- styled, publisher- styled "sexperts," whose books and magazine articles lead us down various primrose paths to more glorious, new and improved lovemaking.

And he warns against the dogmatists, who can always be spotted by their use of "without question," "obviously," and "the truth is." ("Never hire a dogmatist," Herzog writes, fang in cheek.)

Herzog's examples, unfortunately, run on and on. From the "uh," "er" and "like" to the finalizing, eventuating jargon that Herzog calls "executalk," there is more than enough evidence to indicate that we would just as soon not look ourselves square in the vocabulary.

How loosely we discuss "summit" meetings, bristling with "pacts" and "communiques" and "understandings." How glibly we toss about words labels: "obscenity," "welfare," "honor."

Instead of being descriptive of actions and beings and qualities, our words are rather symptoms that tell more about our subjective state of mind than they do about objective realities, catharsis instead of communication.

It's true that increased awareness of consumers of their own power has led to such happily sobering steps as unit pricing, which helps one differentiate between the king size and giant economy size. But we are still a nation that loves superlatives, even if we end up with so many things that are the best in their fields that the distinction between best and worst becomes blurred.

Or to put it another way, when it comes to self-deception, we are No. 1.

SUCCESS STORY

In the long run, the best interests of consumers and retailers alike lie in striving for customer service and satisfaction and building volume sales at low markup. A remarkable merchandising success story from the state of Florida illustrates that these long- proven practices, even in these days of inflationary and competitive confusion, are still well and very much alive.

Two years ago, a business executive from Chicago moved to Florida. With no previous retailing experience he decided to open a music store selling only two things, pianos and electronic organs. As he put it, "I have absolutely no experience as a merchant and was relying completely on my instincts as a consumer. Needless to say, I was concerned that the consumer approach to selling might not be enough to pull me through, but now I'm convinced there's no better way." The results speak for themselves. The first 12 - month sales goal of his organization was reached in 60 days. One store has expanded to seven, and sales are expected to exceed $1.5 million in the second year. In addition to selling at competitive prices, dealing in top merchandise and assuring customer satisfaction, one of the first things the new merchant did was to start giving his customers a little something extra -- trading stamps. The stamps, he pointed out, added "... even more value to the dollars our customers spend with us. And they help me keep my volume up."

Boiled down to its essentials the private enterprise, free market economy adds up to a nation of people making their living by working to meet the needs of other people. Advertising and promotion are an essential part of the process. No battery of laws or team of consumer protectors could ever create the flexibility and capacity for consumer satisfaction built into the free market distribution system that we already have.

TWO LIFELINES OF CIVILIZATION

A particularly good picture of the true stature of telephone companies and electric utility companies in the overall economy of a state was provided in an information briefing prepared for media executives in the state of Michigan. It was pointed out that if all the switches were turned off and the electricity and telephones ceased to work for one day, it "... would be equivalent to stepping back a century in time." As far as the future goes, if utilities didn't grow, nothing else could grow either. If we were to freeze the supplies of electric power and communications services at the level of 1973, we would, whether we liked it or not, also freeze the jobs and productive capacity of the nation at that same level. With a growing population this would add up to a steadily declining standard of living for everyone.

In Michigan the two major electric companies and the telephone company are large employers and taxpayers. They expect to invest some $16 billion over the next 10 years in the expansion and improvement of their facilities to meet public demand. Similar massive capital and telephone service have to meet the costs of providing those services and that includes capital costs. If individuals and institutions are to be expected to make their capital available for investment in plant and equipment for utility industries, they will have to be fairly certain of getting a return on their money comparable to what other industries could pay. Despite needed rate increases, the cost of the two lifelines of civilization, electric power and telephone service, remains low in relation to its impact on the average family budget and in comparison to the general trend of inflation. As an example, since 1960, while the cost of housing has risen 44 per cent, food 41 per cent and clothing 35 per cent, the price of basic telephone service on the average is up only 16.3 per cent.

The next time you look at a light switch or the telephone in your kitchen it would be well to think how essential they are to life as we know it. We should remember how much money someone had to invest to put them there and how little the use of them costs when compared with practically anything else we buy.

HERE'S WHAT HAPPENED TO HIM!

Why is it that the nice, sensible guy you elected to Congress seems to go off the deep end shortly after he gets to Babylon on the Potomac? He often takes on an aura of royalty, tells you how to run your affairs and proposes with blithe unconcern new ways to spend tens of billions of your tax dollars.

It is reported that when new members of the House of Representatives go to Washington they find that suddenly they are "... wrapped in a veritable cocoon of privileges and prerequisites — at taxpayer expense ..." To make sure a fledgling Congressman doesn't overlook anything, there is a new 204-page "Congressional Handbook" outlining all of the goodies provided for his creature comforts and working convenience. In the first place, he has a $157,092 a year allowance to hire a 16- member staff to help him run his office in Washington and in his home district. An employment service to find these people is provided free of charge. Provisions are made for every kind of personal service, from legal help to shoe shining, at no cost. Complete facilities and expert assistance are available within instant reach to help with communications to the folks back home — radio scripts, movies, slides, speeches — anything at all. The Congressman's salary, not to be sneezed at is $42,500 a year and to assure that he stays around to a ripe old age, 31 different health plans are available as well as the complete medical services of Walter Reed Army Hospital and Bethesda Naval Hospital. It's little wonder that that nice fellow from down the block that you sent to Congress fought so hard and valiantly to get the job of representing you and changed so much after he went to Washington. It takes a lot to support a Congressman in the manner to which he becomes accustomed, and it's hard to believe that most of the time we get our money's worth.

BUREAUCRATIC BLOAT

New data just published by the U. S. Census Bureau and analyzed by Harvard Business School Professor Richard Rosenboom show staggering new increases in government employment. Significantly, the greater part of these increases are no longer in federal employment, where we are accustomed to looking for them, but in the payrolls of state and local government.

There was a time when local government, apart from public schools, was considered a single entity. Now, special local government districts proliferate enormously in numbers, cost and staffs, so that there are actually 78,269 governmental units of all kinds in our country today. These employ a total of 13,600,000 civilians, sustained by the productivity of the taxpayers.

Professor Rosenboom shows that industrial productivity has been approximately doubling every 25 years during this century. But the total number of persons employed by government has more than tripled in the past 25 years. Three million more persons are expected to be added to civilian federal, state and local payrolls by 1980.

None of these include members of the armed forces, who are necessary to the defense of our country during these troubled and perilous times.

State and local government payrolls have increased from $30 billion to $85 billion per year in only 10 years. This is the principal reason for recent sharp increases in local taxes. By comparison, government employment and pay scales for Germany and Japan, with their prosperous, booming economies, are much lower. We must call a halt to our own bureaucratic bloat before it bankrupts us. HLH

Washington Merry-Go-Round

By Jack Anderson

Butz's Bungles

WASHINGTON — Many factors have combined to send prices skyrocketing in the supermarkets. But the biggest blame falls upon Agriculture Secretary Earl Butz, who has handled the delicate farm controls like the operator of an erratic tractor crashing through a cornfield.

This is the whispered view of Agriculture Department economists, who speak privately of his farm failures as "Butz' bungles." These range from the Russian wheat deal to faulty crop estimates, which have had disastrous results.

The tragedy is that the poor are paying the most for Butz's follies. Buried in his files are grim statistics, which show supermarket inflation has affected basic necessities far more than the luxury items only the affluent can now afford. Many poor families face the prospect of meatless holiday tables during the Christmas season.

Hamburger prices, for example, shot up 41 per cent while sirloin steak rose only 18 per cent. The low- budget meats and poultry jumped a dramatic 50 per cent during the past year. A year ago, chicken cost about 42 cents a pound. Now the price is close to 72 cents a pound, a staggering 71 per cent increase.

FRANKS, BACON, BOLOGNA

Hot dogs have gone up 49 per cent, bologna 36 per cent. Bacon, once a common item, is now a luxury on many breakfast tables. It has shot up 67 per cent.

Substitutes like fish have also been priced beyond the pocketbooks of the poor. Perch fillet has gone up 36 per cent.

In startling contrast, the meats favored by the affluent have risen only an average 25 per cent in price. Fancy cheeses have drifted up 11 per cent. Porterhouse steak has risen 17 per cent. Lobster tail prices have gone up only slightly.

Other staples have registered sharp price increases. Flour is up 36 per cent, potatoes 32 per cent, rice 30 per cent.

A comparison of 13 items reveals that economy foods jumped an average of 31 per cent from September 1972 to September 1973, as compared to an average gain of only 21 per cent for their luxury counterparts. While margarine increased 24 per cent, for example, the mark-up for the "high- priced spread" was only 15 per cent.

The reasons for the price rocketing, of course, are complex. But economists, who work for Butz, lay the heaviest blame on his inept handling of the agricultural economy.

FAULTY ESTIMATES

All year long, for example, the Agriculture Department has put out inflated crop estimates. The economists suspect the faulty estimates have been influenced by the Administration's eagerness for good news.

But the eventual result has been bad news. The high estimates caused prices to drop briefly. Then the low prices increased the demand. By the time the Agricultue Department got around to straightening out the figures, prices would zoom back up to even greater heights.

This happened with cattle, corn and pigs. Butz predicted a six per cent increased in pig production. Instead, there was a two per cent decline.

Similarly, a staggering five million head of cattle, which Butz had mistakenly counted, never made it to market. An anticipated increase in dairy production also never materialized. All these miscalculations helped to drive up prices.

Butz's biggest bungle, of course, as the Russian wheat deal. His poor appraisal of the world demand for wheat led him to sell one-quarter of the U. S. crop to Russia for $1.63 a bushel. By the time the last bushels had squeezed through the clogged transportation system, the price had soared to nearly four dollars a bushel.

INFLATION IMPACT

The vacillating farm policites also had an inflationary impact upon prices. Rumors that price regulations would be implemented at the farm level discouraged production and the resulting cutbacks sent prices up.

When controls were slapped on beef prices, livestock producers withheld their beef from the market and caused a price rise. The Administration also threatened to curb exports, then decided against it, all to the detriment of consumer prices.

The failure to do anything about the bogged transportation system, which slows down the delivery of food, also had an effect on the market. The Administration also refused to control the wild speculation in commodities, which helped to drive up prices.

The results were predictable: higher prices for supermarket shoppers, particularly the poor. Some low-income families and elderly people on fixed incomes have been reduced to buying dog food for their dinner tables; For these people, Butz' bungles will bring a bleak holiday season.

Footnote: An official spokesman denied that Butz had mismanaged agricultural affairs. The spokesman contended that price controls, rather than overestimated crop reports, had caused dislocations on the farm. The wrong estimates, he argued, had "a minimal effect" on production and prices. He blamed the rise in food prices upon inflation, pointing out that nonfood prices had risen, too. He defended higher food prices, saying it was time the farmers got their fair share of the food dollar. He declined to be drawn into a discussion of whether food processors and packagers, rather than the farmers, were getting the biggest benefits from price increases.

Rationing plan explained

WASHINGTON (AP) — The White House proposed a heating oil rationing plan Tuesday under which home owners using oil must lower their thermostats six degrees. All others using oil for heat must lower their thermostats ten degrees.

Here, in question and answer form, is an explanation of the plan, subject to official revision before its final adoption.

Q. Does absolutely everybody have to lower his heat?

A. Not everybody. Just householders and building operators who heat with "middle distillate fuel" that includes the usual "Number Two" home heating oil, kerosene, range oil, stove oil and diesel fuel. Those who heat with natural gas, electricity, wood or some other fuel are requested to cut their fuel consumption but are not legally required to do so.

Q. If I have to reduce my heating by government order, why don't those others?

A. Oil is a heating fuel whose deliveries can be controlled. It is much more difficult, in fact nearly impossible, to cut deliveries of electricity and natural gas for heating without creating serious problems and safety hazards. The administration is studying ways to cut the use of electricity and natural gas, possibly by imposing some sort of tax or surcharge on excess consumption. But it has not yet come up with a plan.

Q. What right does the government have to tell me how to heat my home?

A. It has the legal authority, based on 1973 amendments to the 1970 Economic Stabilization Act — the "Eagleton Amendment" — to control the distribution of fuels. It has been controlling distribution of home heating oil at the wholesale level since Nov. 1. Now, it plans to extend that control to the final consumer.

Q. Why is this necessary?

A. Because the United States has been increasing its fuel demand faster than its supply. The Arab oil nations made our problem worse by cutting off their shipments of oil to the United States last October. Thus, the consumption of all petroleum products — gasoline, home heating oil, industrial oil diesel and jet fuel — must be cut.

Q. I wouldn't mind turning down the thermostate a degree or two, but why six degrees?

A. That's what the government figures it will take to save about 15 per cent of the distillate oils: a six-degree reduction in homes and ten degrees everywhere else.

Q. President Nixon said Sunday night we should lower the heat six degrees to an average indoor temperature of 68 degrees. We always keep the thermostat at 68. Must we cut back?

A. Yes. You will have to turn your thermostat down to 62. The regulation says: "Each end-user must reduce his ambient indoor temperature by the appropriate amount, or take actions which will result in a fuel saving equivalent ..."

Q. Who's going to make me?

A. Nobody. But if you don't do it, you'll run out of fuel on a cold day.

Q. But my dealer makes sure my oil tank is full.

A. He won't in the future. The first delivery he makes under this program, he will fill up your fuel tank. After that, he will figure out how much is needed to refill it, but he will subtract six degrees' worth of fuel. It's up to you to make it last until the next delivery.

Q. If my dealer has to cut me back six degrees, how will be know where I set my thermostat last winter?

A. He doesn't have to know that. He knows how much fuel you used in December and January, because he sold it to you. He can figure out how much fuel your house used on a cold day a year ago, and, based on the current weather, he can figure out how much fuel your home would normally have used. Then he would subtract enough fuel for six degrees of heating, and deliver the result.

Q. What if I own a new house with oil heat and don't have a dealer or a record of a normal fuel use?

A. Each state is expected to set up local boards, appointed by each governor, to assign dealers to new customers. The regulations say new oil heaters will be allowed to operate at normal levels for a while to establish their performance, and then will be cut back six degrees or ten degrees like everyone else.

Ann Landers

Transvestite compares his dressing like a woman to country weekend

Dear Ann Landers: Since I am a transvestite I know more about the subject than you do. If you are willing to learn, please read on.

It's difficult (maybe impossible) for a male who doesn't have the urge to dress in women's clothes to understand what this does in the way of "relaxation" and exhilaration. I have been doing it for 35 years and I can tell you there is no feeling to equal it.

When I first started to dress up I was about 17. I used to "borrow" my mother's clothes until I could afford to buy my own wardrobe. I pretended I was Billie Dove, Beebe Daniel, Nancy Carroll or Clara Bow--- depending on my mood. This isn't the same as a person who believes he's Napoleon. I always KNEW who I was, but it was fun pretending.

In those flights of fantasy I was able to relax completely. A couple of hours of make-believe was like a weekend in the country.

No one can tell by looking at me that I am a transvestite. There isn't a single clue that might give me away. So, Ann, tell your readers that they never know who is doing what in his spare time. The man you least suspect probably is.--- This Week You Can Call Me Liz

Dear Liz: Thank you for an illuminating glance at life as some people live it. If dressing up in women's clothes does as much for you as a weekend in the country, it's O. K. with me. Stay home and enjoy yourself. There are too many people on the highway anyway.

Dear Ann Landers: It's too late to do anything about it this year but I hope you will print my letter so I will know what to do next November. My husband and I have been married seven years and we have spent every Thanksgiving with his folks.

I feel just terrible about this because I am the only one of five married children who has yet to be seated at our family's Thanksgiving table. Furthermore, my parents are in their 70s and my husband's parents are in their 50s. Without coming out and saying it, you know what I'm thinking.

Thanksgiving dinner at my in- laws' is a social affair. There are always several business acquaintances and golf and canasta friends. They cocktail it up for at least an hour before dinner. By the time we sit down everyone is pretty well plastered. No one says a prayer of Thnksgiving. It might as well be Hallowe'en.

Every year I have gone home depressed--- with a sick headache. But I don't seem to be able to win this battle. I've been tempted to tell my husband that he can go to his folks and I'll go to mine, but I just can't bring myself to do it. Married people belong together on Thanksgiving. I need your help, Ann.--- Gobbled Up

Dear Gobbled: You don't say where you go for Christmas. Sometimes couples who have this problem compromise. Start in July of next year to condition your husband to the idea that next Thanksgiving is going to be spent with your parents. If he hasn't agreed by November 15, tell him you are going to your parents' home and he can go to his. I agree that married people should be together on Thanksgiving, but circumstances alter cases, and your situation is definitely out of the ordinary.

Confidential to Love Him Or Leave Him: You're going to have a hard time "leaving" a man who has already left you. Call it "love" if you want to, but any resemblance to love and what goes on between you two is purely miraculous.

Ann Landers discusses teen-age drinking--- its myths, its realities. Learn the facts by reading, "Booze and You--- For Teen- Agers Only," by Ann Landers. Send 35c in coin and a long, self- addressed, stamped envelope to Ann Landers, P. O. Box 3346, Chicago, Ill. 60654.

Edward L. Morrisons mark anniversary with ceremony

Mr. and Mrs. Edward L. Morrison

NEW MADRID — Mr. and Mrs. Edward L. Morrison of New Madrid celebrated their 25th wedding anniversary Sunday evening at First Church of God in Lilbourn.

The candlelight ceremony and worship service consisted of the couple repeating their marriage vows and a double-ring ceremony. The Rev. Don Jordan, pastor, performed the ceremony and gave a charge for a oneness in Christ as well as a oneness in marriage.

Mrs. Morrison is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Walter Frazier of New Madrid, and Morrison is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Harvey Morrison of Lilbourn.

Mrs. Morrison wore a long evening dress of pastel pink chiffon over taffeta with a burgundy velvet vest trimmed in pink and burgundy rosebud lace. Her pink shoulder- length veil was held in place by a pink satin crown. Her bridal bouquet was made of pink carnations and red rose buds.

The maid of honor was Mrs. Ellen Adams of Trumann, Ark., sister of the bride. She wore a full- length, pink, knit dress and carried a nosegay bouquet of pink carnations and red rosebuds.

Best man was Bob Adams of Trumann.

Special singing was provided by Pete Chartrau of Sikeston, who was accompanied by Mrs. Estelle Steward of Lilbourn.

A reception followed the ceremony in the church fellowship hall. Serving were Mrs. Virginia Cole of St. Louis, Mrs. Hazel Jordan of New Madrid and Miss Jackie Adams of Trumann.

The guestbook was attended by Mrs. Dorothy Morrison of Lilbourn.

The anniversary celebration was attended by several out- of- town guests.

Patti Palsgrove bride of David Jones

Mr. and Mrs. David Russell Jones

CAPE GIRARDEAU-- Gold palm stands filled with mixed greenery, white pompom chrysanthemums and two white love birds were balanced by twin candelabras on either side to form the altar setting for the wedding of Miss Patti Jeannie Palsgrove and David Russell Jones at First Christian Church on Nov. 3.

Windows on each side of the sanctuary held single candles decorated with white satin bows and greenery; and the candelabras and center aisle were also marked with white satin bows.

The Rev. Max Jenkins performed the double- ring ceremony. Mrs. Robert Renfrow was organist, and Roger Bierschwal of Van Buren was soloist.

Mr. and Mrs. Jack E. Palsgrove of Cape Girardeau are parents of the bride, and Mrs. Russell Jones of Sikeston is the mother of the groom.

Given in marriage by her father, the bride wore a formal gown with lace bodice, long straight sleeves and a Sabrina neckline. The full traditional- style skirt was of nylon organza with a panel of Chantilly lace ruffles cascading down the front and worn over a hoop. A cathedral train of organza and lace was attached at the waist.

A flowered bandeau of lace and pearls held a fingertip triple- length veil edged in scalloped overlaid lace. She carried a bouquet of white sweetheart roses, pixie carnations, stephanotis, blue baby's breath and lace and satin ribbons with knots.

Mrs. George Hassemer of Bakersfield, Calif., sister of the bride, was matron of honor. Bridesmaids were Mrs. Doyle Dowd and Mrs. Terry Weissmueller. They wore formal gowns of aqua and turquoise crepe with empire waistlines, high ruffled necklines and ruffles at the mock bib and cuffs of the long sleeves. The skirts were softly gathered with a tie belt in the back.

Doyle Dowd was best man, and groomsmen were Joe Merkler and Milford Jones, brother of the groom, both of Sikeston. Ushers were Robert Nations Jr. and Victor Rogers of Cape Girardeau and Nick Korff of St. Louis.

A reception followed in the social room of the church where Mrs. Robert Nations Jr. and Miss Trudy Cooper, of Cape Girardeau, Miss Sally Nethery of Memphis, Tenn., and Mrs. Clarence Webb of McClure, Ill., served guests. Miss Paula Cobb of McClure, Ill., attended the guest book.

The case of the overstuffed house

By Jack Strauss, LL.B.

When Oscar died, it was commonly believed that his only asset was his old house. And while old houses usually come from the same mold, his house was moldier than most. Consequently, after buying it, the first thing Wilbur did was to start cleaning it up.

While doing so, to his great surprise, he found an assortment of valuable securities tucked away in old books, bureaus, mattresses, etc. Needless to say, he was extremely overjoyed but he wasn't nearly as overjoyed as Oscar's daughter who immediately claimed the securities as part of her late father's estate.

"Baloney," responded Wilbur. "When I bought the house, the deed specifically included all of its contents. That not only included books, bureaus, mattresses, etc., but all the stuffings."

"Baloney to you sir," retorted the daughter. "You were sold a house and contents, but not a fortune in securitiies. While you may be plucky, you're not that lucky."

Whereupon, Oscar's determined daughter sought to recover the securities in court.

IF YOU WERE THE JUDGE, would you permit Wilbur to keep the stuffings?

This is how the judge ruled: NO! The judge held that when a house and its contents are sold, "contents" generally refers to objects of furnishings and household goods that are normally found in a house and which are frequently sold as part of the property. Items of personal property, noted the judge, do not pass to the purchaser in the absence of an intent to that effect. In this case, concluded the judge, there was no intent that Wilbur was to acquire ownership of the valuable securities.

Prayer for today

from the Upper Room

Martha, Martha! You are worried and troubled over so many things, but just one is needed. Mary has chosen the right thing, and it will not be taken away from her. (Luke 10:41- 42)

PRAYER: O God, may we strive always to have kind thoughts of others, to give them the benefit of any doubt, to put ourselves in their place, and try to understand them better. Amen.

Energy crisis not expected to have much effect on Mo. tourism

SPRINGFIELD, Mo. (AP) — The energy crisis won't hurt Missouri's tourism business as much as many other areas, Steve Kappler of the Missouri Tourism Commission believes.

"We are in a central location within a short driving distance of a lot of people," he said Tuesday. "People are reluctant to reduce their leisure activities."

About 150,000 persons are employed in the state tourism industry and the payroll is about $720 million annually, he noted.

"We think people are going to take their vacations, but they will stay closer to home," Kappler said. "That puts Missouri with its central location in a good location."

However, Ron Conn of Silver Dollar City near Branson takes a different view. He said a 35 per cent drop in attendance was expected and the winter labor force of 320 was reduced by 83.

Fuel shortage causes major layoffs before Christmas

WASHINGTON (AP) — The fuel shortage has begun taking its toll on jobs, putting thousands out of work before Christmas in the first of an expected series of major layoffs that may push unemployment up sharply.

Layoffs are reported in the auto, chemical, construction and textile industries.

Frontier Airlines is furloughing 150 workers. Meanwhile, the nation's largest carrier, United Air Lines, announced it would begin layoffs for at least 950 employes Jan. 7.

Economists and labor leaders say it is still too early to determine the full impact of the energy crisis on jobs.

The nation's jobless rate had been anticipated to rise next year as the nation's economic growth slowed, and the fuel shortage now is expected to add to it.

Some private economists have forecast an unemployment rate next year of anywhere from 5 to 8 per cent, compared to the current rate of 4.5 per cent.

A rate of 6 per cent would throw an additional 1.3 million Americans out of work on top of the 4.1 million now without jobs.

But President Nixon's Council of Economic Advisers has challenged the higher forecasts and has scheduled a news conference Thursday to declare that the energy crisis will have no massive impact on the economy and unemployment, it was learned.

Sources said that the council will say they expect the unemployment rate will not reach 6 per cent next year.

Labor leaders, mindful of the administration's optimistic forecasts earlier this year on bringing inflation under control, remain unconvinced.

"We're worried about it and are watching the situation," said an official of the Oil, Chemical and Atomic Workers union in Denver. "We're convinced there's going to be shortages of petrochemicals," and this will affect jobs in, among others, the fertilizer, chemical, cosmetic and pharmaceutical industries, he said.

Scouts receive award

Government prepares to take control of petroleum sales

WASHINGTON (AP) — Gasoline rationing is looming a step closer as President Nixon's Cabinet-level energy group has soured on fuel-saving tax ideas.

"Almost everybody is leaning toward rationing," an administration source said, describing the attitudes expressed in a meeting Tuesday of the Emergency Energy Action Group assigned by Nixon to recommend energy-crisis policy.

The source said even Treasury Secretary George P. Shultz, the strongest advocate of a gasoline tax to avoid rationing, was "not all that firm" for taxes in the meeting.

But the group has not yet made up its mind and was to discuss the issues again Thursday, the source said.

"What Shultz really would like to do is take the lid right off gasoline prices," the source related, but he said neither Shultz nor anyone else thought this should be done as long as there is a gasoline shortage.

Unlimited prices, he said, would only open the way for oil companies to roll up windfall profits by overcharging customers in a shortage market.

The notion of imposing a tax of 30 to 40 cents per gallon, to discourage unnecessary gasoline use had some appeal, but the source said the Cabinet group appeared to be reaching the conclusion a tax would take too long to clear Congress and would act too slowly to cut gasoline use.

Although President Nixon said Sunday night that gasoline supplies will be reduced 15 per cent to increase the supplies of other petroleum fuels, the administration's crisis strategy calls for a 30 per cent gasoline cutback.

And administration sources said Tuesday the cuts probably will be increased to 30 per cent over the next several months.

Pediatrics receives $2,000

The Sikeston Junior Woman's Club today presented to the pediatrics department of Missouri Delta Community Hospital a check for $2,000.

Most of the money was raised from a club fund drive which included the Red Stocking Follies and the Maharaja contest.

In addition to the funds raised by the drive, about $200 was added from the club treasury.

The money will be used to purchase a portable isolette.

$45 in change stolen from car

Police today were investigating the theft of $45 in change from the glove compartment of a car belonging to Miles Ward, 1506 Osage St.

Ward told police he was loading his car in front of his house Tuesday when he stepped into the house about 9:35 p.m. When he came back out, he said, he saw three youths taking the money out of the glove compartment.

MASH returns to screen

Hailed as "the best American war comedy since sound came in", "M*A*S*H", 20th Century- Fox's irreverent look at war, returns Friday to Malco Twin Cinema II. Donald Sutherland, Elliott Gould, Tom Skerritt, Sally Kellerman, Robert Duvall and Jo Ann Pflug star in the Panavision, deluxe color production.

Gould and Sutherland are Army surgeons who develop a lunatic lifestyle in order to function and keep their sanity amid the everyday horrors encountered in a mobile Army surgical hospital (M*A*S*H) during the Korean War. They are skilled and dedicated in their profession, but they are equally skilled in making a shambles of Army bureaucracy.

Among the performers who share or are victims of their antics at the Army base are Sally Kellerman, the rigidly strict head nurse whom they transform into a warm human being; Robert Duvall, the overly pious major; Jo Ann Pflug, another nurse, succinctly described as "the sexiest in military history;" and Rene Auberjonois, the compassionate chaplain.

The pro gridders, most of whom have since retired, were assembled by former Kansas Clity Chiefs all- pro defensive halfback Fred Williamson.

Involved in the "game", in addition to the stars, were Howard Williams and Ben Davidson of the Oakland Raiders; Jack Concannon, John Myers and Tom Woodeschick of the Philadelphia Eagles; Timmy Brown of the Baltimore Colts; and Buck Buchanan and "Supergnat" Nolan Smith of the Kansas City Chiefs.

Robert Altman directed for Ingo Preminger, who made his smash hit debut as a producer with "M*A*S*H". Ring Lardner Jr. wrote the screenplay, adapting it from the bestseller by Richard Hooker, a pseudonym.

The author is one of the nation's leading surgeons, which explains his lucid handling of his characters' vocation and, due to the rigid proprieties of his profession, may well account for his reticence to be identified with his daring, far- out theme.

Both Gould and Sutherland went on to super- stardom after M*A*S*H and are currently reteamed in the forthcoming "Wet Stuff", which takes on the CIA.

Gould's roster of films includes "Getting Straight"; Ingmar Bergman's "The Touch" (he was the first American to work with Bergman); "The Long Goodbye", in which he played Raymond Chandler's sleuth, Philip Marlowe, for director Robert Altman; and "Busting", in which he played a vice cop.

Sutherland has starred in "Kelly's Heroes"; "Little Murders" (with Gould); "Alex in Wonderland"; "Klute", opposite Jane Fonda; "Steelyard Blues", also with Miss Fonda, "Lady Ice"; and "Don't Look Now", a British production co- starring Julie Christie.

Miss Kellerman's latest starring role was in "Slither", with James Caan. Duvall is still remembered for his performance in "The Godfather".

The movie is in color and rated G(suitable for general audiences).

Now playing at the Malone Theater downtown are "Vampier Circus" and "Countess Dracula", both in color and rated G.

A special children's matinee, "Puss and Boots", will be shown at 2 p.m. Saturday. Beginning Sunday will be "Detroit 9000", starring Alex Rocco. The movie is rated R (restricted, persons under 17 admitted only with parents' approval).

Held over at Malco Twin Cinema I is "Welcome Home, Soldier Boys", starring Joe Don Baker. The film is in color and rated R.

"Jesus Christ Superstar" ends Thursday at Malco Twin Cinema II to make way for "M*A*S*H".

Few advisory services make recommendations

By CROCKETT SCOTT

There may be lots of bargains around in the stock market these days on the basis of fundamentals such as price- per- share in relation to sales and earnings, but few advisory services are making recommendations.

One of those which is making specific recommendations is Moody's Stock Survey. Here are the survey's selections and comments:

"Certain- Teed Products: A squeeze on profit margins held the gain in third quarter net to only three per cent, despite a 23 per cent advance in sales. Shortages of raw materials and energy were factors, as were sharply higher interest charges and the price- control barrier to price increases.

"Primary earnings per share were unchanged at 70 cents, from one year ago, because of conversions of preferred stock that increased outstanding common. Fully diluted earnings were up five per cent, to 66 cents. We expect primary earnings to amount to $2.30 a share this year, and only a modest gain next year. Nonetheless, with its good longer term prospects, we continue to consider the medium grade stock a buy for appreciation.

"Crown Cork & Seal: Results came in about as had been expected for the third quarter, with profits up eight per cent year- to- year, on 14 per cent higher sales. Nine-months earnings rose 10 per cent on 14 per cent more volume. With about 750,000 fewer shares outstanding, per-share earnings for the nine months were up 15 per cent to $1.38.

"Crown has bought more of its stock since the end of September. We expect Crow's earnings to gain about 10 per cent next year from an estimated $1.80 a share this year. The medium grade common is still a buy.

"Hudson Bay Mining & Smelting: Booming copper and zinc prices and strong demand for fertilizer products here and abroad are contributing to an excellent performance by Hudson Bay Mining & Smelting this year. Profits, before an extraordinary item, soared 181 per cent to $2.86 a share for the first three quarters of 1973, from one year earlier, on a 65 per cent advance in sales. We now estimate that the company will earn in excess of $3.75 for the year, and prospects for further gains are excellent next year.

"With bright longer range prospects for Hudson Bay's diversifying mining interests, the investment grade stock is still a buy.

The 21st century is now

Two out of three Americans living today will live to see the 21st century. In fact, the newborn child on the opposite page will be just 27 years old by the year 2,000. She will live two thirds of her entire life in the next century.

At Metropolitan Life, we recognize that the future is not as far off as we sometimes think. We also recognize that to serve your interest best, we must anticipate the future. Project ourselves into it. Try to identify problems that may not even exist today. And start looking for solutions today — not tomorrow.

So we're preparing for the future now. We're doing many things that can make your future and your children's future easier, safer and more satisfying.

For example, Metropolitan Life is working with the medical profession on ways to improve your medical care — and to make the best possible care available to everyone at reasonable cost now and in the future.

Future generations will be the direct beneficiaries of our many medical and health education programs.

We're also anticipating the future in many other areas important to you, such as education, retirement and housing. For instance, the housing we invest in must not only be livable today — but also 50, 60, and 70 years from now.

We've been thinking harder than we've ever thought before about the future and how it will affect you and your family. We believe we've gained new insights, new ideas and we've developed new approaches.

But most of all, our studies have made us realize the urgency of preparing for the future now because the future is now, Today. One second from now.

And that's why we're ready to help you now. At Metropolitan Life, we're ready with imaginative and farsighted policies and programs for the future.

Once you talk to your local Met Life representative, we think you'll agree he understands your plans and hopes for the future.

We think you'll also agree he can help you prepare for the future.

No. 2

People still have about the same concern. They're interested in their youngsters learning a value system. The parents want their kids to have values – such values as integrity and honesty, the work ethic: you work for what you get and work has dignity. These conversations crop up in every part of the state. We are getting the same kind of input in a number of areas in the state."

Continuing, Dr. Mallory said he thinks every youngster in the state of Missouri ought to be good at five things.

"I think he ought to be able to read. I think he ought to be able to handle the English language in spoken and written form. I think he ought to be able to figure simple interest. If he can figure simple interest, he can buy and he won't get taken quite so much.

"I think he ought to understand the economic system which has made America a great system, and I think he ought to know something about the government of this land, and how to work within this system to make it better.

Now if we can have those basic things known by everybody, then you can move into any area you want to and be a contributing citizen, I think."

Dr. Mallory said that a new improved classification accreditation procedure for schools has been implemented by the State Department of Education as a result of the 1971 statewide conferences.

The new procedure allows more flexibility at the local district to take care of individual differences, he said.

In 1972, regional conferences centered around school finances, Dr. Mallory said, and the type of programs the people wanted for their schools. Listed were college preparatory courses, vocational technical training and special education.

As a result of the input by citizens during the 1972 educational conferences, Dr. Mallory pointed out that Missouri House Bill No. 474, providing for special education and also the academically talented student, was passed by the General Assembly.

The bill, he said, is being hailed across the nation as one of the outstanding pieces of special education legislation in the nation.

Dr. Mallory also noted that the General Assembly has nearly doubled its efforts for vocational technical programs.

Other educational programs that are attracting attention, according to Dr. Mallory, are individualized instruction, early childhood education to offset possible educational deprivation in some of the homes and a new assessment system under development to evaluate the schools at the district level to determine if they are meeting learning objectives set by Missouri citizens.

Dr. Mallory spoke enthusiastically about an early childhood learning program in the Ferguson-Florissant district. The program involves the parents, teacher and student in the home as well as the classroom in educational activities and experiences useful to individual students.

State Sen. Nelson B. Tinnin of Hornersville briefly commented on the value of vocational- technical training and the necessity of such education for students to be productive who do not pursue a college degree.

The skilled worker, he said, very often ranks the same or above a college graduate on the salary scale.

Concerned over the school classification procedure, now in use was expressed by State Rep. Vic Downing of Bragg City, who said he had heard criticism that classification had been based more on input than output by the schools.

"We hear a lot about testing, evaluation and accountability," Downing said.

He stated that he thinks consideration should be given to the criteria used for teachers' salaries.

In most districts, he said salaries are based on the number of college hours a teacher has and that some teachers, which he believes to be a minority, are not doing as good a job as others, yet they receive the same salary.

Stage set at BHS

BERNIE-- The stage is set for Thursday night's semifinal round of the 14th annual BHS Invitational basketball tournament after pre-tourney favorites, Parma and Risco, claimed wins Tuesday.

Parma started the evening with a narrow 73-71 decision over the Bloomfield Wildcats and Risco followed with a 72-63 victory over Richland.

Thursday's schedule matches Gideon and Puxico in the opening game at 7 p.m. and Risco and Parma in the 8:30 nightcap. All four teams were among the top four seeded in the event.

Tuesday night Bloomfield narrowly missed the biggest upset of the event when the hustling Wildcats fell two points short of knocking off the second seeded Pirates.

Parma sped to an 18 point lead and seemed headed for a route, but the scrappy, sharp shooting Wildcat team stormed back and stayed within striking range of the talented Pirate quintet until the final buzzer.

Bloomfield completely out-played their taller opponents and gave up the victory at the charity line where the Pirates held a 11-7 advantage. The Wildcats outshot the PHS cagers 32-31 from the field.

Bloomfield was led by John Nelson with 20 points. The sharp-shooting BHS forward provided the spark that ignited the Wildcat rally, and kept it going with his deadly shooting. Gary Johnson had 16 and Steve Rushin added 16 to the BHS total.

Risco had a little easier time than did their neighboring New Madrid county neighbors, romping to a 21-12 lead in the first quarter and adding to that margin the next two quarters on the way to their 72-63 victory.

Richland made a fourth quarter charge at the Golden Tigers, out-scoring them 23-13, but the damage had already been done.

Steve Landers, showing a deceptive move under the basket, led all scorers on the night with 28 points for the Tigers. David Noyes had 15 and Robert Hester 14 to lead the Rebels attack.

A latent Homo Sapien, who throws tires at anybody who doesn't believe in Evolution. 3. Nope. He's Jerry Bilt, zoo painter. Holds gimmick: A long pole to paint ape's cage (says he's allergic to fur and having his leg pulled off). His Maxi-Long cigarettes easily break in half, too. 4 & 5. No and no. They're Sam and Janet Evening, movie team making a low budget jungle picture: "King Kong Gives Detroit A Hickie." 6. He's Skip Tickel. Was given this address to deliver 12 Chinese dinners. ## Sports Corner

by Ron Jaynes

The Old Pro picked the most correct games this season but he will still be unable to gain the coveted crown of Top Predictor. Sportswriters Stuart McGhee and Dianne Ezzell finished ahead of the pro with 83 and 81 percentages to his 79.

Among the guest prognosticators, John Greer came in first with 77% of his predictions coming true. Danny Summerfield, who led the pack for most of the season, finished with a 75% mark. Jerry Gentry complied a 60-81 season to finish with a 74% mark. Bobby Gentry and Mike Gentry tied with 72% and Eddie Smart, the only other regular guesser finished with a 67% average.

David Ziegenhorn, Tony Ford, and Billy Harrison predicted some games and finished with 70, 73, and 64 per centages for the year.

There's not much action Wednesday night so maybe I can make another one hundred per cent.

Woodland Invitational — Zalma vs. Meadow Heights — The Panthers are too tall for the Bulldogs so the Panthers will triumph — 70-60.

Leopold vs. Woodland — The Cardinals will make easy work of these visitors — 75-57.

South Pemiscot Invitational — Caraway, Ark. vs. Cooter — Cooter by six — 60-54.

Sikeston Invitational

Mac optimistic

Coach N. P. McDaniel is very optimistic concerning the 1973- 74 basketball season as his Sikeston Bulldogs have turned out for practice in full force and are preparing for their opening season clash at the Bulldog Mini-dome Friday night against Blytheville, Ark.

The Bulldogs always have to wait until the football season is closed before the roundball practice can get into full swing as some of the basketball players participate in football.

This is Mac's sixth year at the helm of the Bulldogs and Sikeston has won their regional three times.

The Bulldog coach received considerable criticism through the first half of last season but after Pope Hunt became eligible at mid- season Sikeston won 10 of their last 13 games after a terrible 0-10 start. The Bulldogs finished 10-13 and entered first round play of the class L state tournament after upsetting the highly rated Cape Central Tigers.

"We're looking hopefully forward to a good season", commented coach McDaniel. "The eighth grade will definitely help our program. The boys will learn the fundamentals before they become freshmen," he said.

Mike Foster will coach the eighth graders and Asa Kinneman is the Freshman mentor with Buddy Spears heading the junior varsity squad.

For the first time in the history of Sikeston Basketball the Bulldogs will begin their season in November as Blytheville, Arkansas visits the field house Friday night, November 30.

"We visit three states this season as we have some top clubs on our schedule," coach McDaniel said. "We play Collierville, which was one of the Tennessee state champions last year." Meridian, Ill. is always a good Illinois club each year."

Coach McDaniel has eight returning lettermen to put together a winning combination this season. Three returning starters give coach Mac a bright outlook for the upcoming year. Roy Bowman, a 6-1 senior, Mark Couch, a 5-10 guard and Ronald Marks, a 5-10 guard have enough experience and shooting ability to make the Bulldogs a winner.

Newcomers that should help the Bulldogs considerably are junior Vangalee West, who missed last season after starring on the freshman team. Roger Tillman, a 6-3 junior and Howard Tate, a 6-3 junior will give Sikeston enough height to compete. Tillman has injured his leg and will miss the Blytheville encounter but is expected to be back in time to play in the Sikeston Invitational tournament beginning December 3rd.

At this time the fifth spot on the Bulldog starting team is wide open as Tillman and Tate are battling for the honor.

Senior Donnie Taylor, a 5-10 guard and 5-11 James Bryant are expected to see a lot of action for the Bulldogs as the season progresses.

"We don't know anything about Blytheville at this time, but they have always had big clubs before," commented coach Mac.

The eighth grade had 36 participants aiming at a starting berth for coach Mike Foster. The Freshman turnout was very good with some very good prospects as coach Kinneman is busy putting together the first five players.

Lilbourn tops poll

The undefeated Lilbourn Panthers, winners of the North Pemiscot Invitational tournament title and top seeded for next week's Sikeston Invitational, head up the Daily Standard's first regular season basketball ratings as chosen over the weekend by the 15- member panel of coaches.

Holding down the number two spot is the Panthers New Madrid county league rivals, Matthews Pirates, who are only six points out of the lead. Both are undefeated on the season.

Once beaten Kelly holds a slim two point edge over their only conqueror this season, the Notre Dame Bulldogs, who handed the Hawks the defeat in Cape Girardeau two weeks ago.

Class 4-A rivals, Cape Girardeau Central and Poplar Bluff, hold down the sixth and seventh positions in the ratings behind fifth place Neelyville. The Bengals and Mules have yet to see any action this season.

Another member of the New Madrid County league, Parma, holds down the eighth place in the ratings and is followed by undefeated Puxico. Parma lost to Scott Central in both teams season opener.

Advance, the defending poll champion, tied for 10th place with Scott Central. The Braves knocked off the Hornets to open the season and upset Parma before losing to East Prairie this week.

The ratings will be released Tuesday or Wednesday of each week throughout the season, with the final ratings coming after the completing of the state tournament.

As in the past, the Daily Standard will award the M. M. McMahon memorial "Number One" team award to the squad that finishes atop the final season ratings.

| | | |
|---|---|---|
| (1) Lilbourn (6) | 5-0 | 103 |
| (2) Matthews (3) | 3-0 | 97 |

BILOXI, Miss. — Technical Sergeant Loy D. Kidd, whose wife Noland is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. W. D. Fields of Steelville, Mo., has graduated at Keesler Air Force Base from the U.S. Air Force basic electronics principles course conducted by the Air Training Command.

Sgt. Kidd, who received instruction in communications and electronics systems principles, is remaining at Keesler for advanced training.

A 1959 graduate of Essex (Mo.) High School, the sergeant attended Southwest Missouri State University.

FT. HOOD, Tex. — Army Warrant Officer Steven S. Davis, 22, son of Mrs. Betty J. Stevens of 4411 Burington, St. Petersburg, Fla., is assigned to the 1st Cavalry Division at Ft. Hood.

His rather, Russell E. Davis, lives in Gray Ridge, Mo.

U.S. FORCES, Germany — Army Staff Sgt. Gerald E. Kelley, son of Mr. and Mrs. James O. Kelley of 849 William St., Sikeston, Mo., participated with other American and allied troops Oct. 10-16 in Exercise Reforger V in Germany.

The Military Airlift Command flew approximately 11,000 U.S. - based soldiers and more than 1,000 tons of equipment to three different airfields in Germany in preparation for the event.

The exercise, conducted by the Joint Chiefs of Staff and NATO, focused on the procedures and techniques for receiving, equipping, assembling and employing units after they arrive, rather than on rapid deployment of troops from the United States.

Sgt. Kelley is regularly assigned with Headquarters Company, 1st Infantry Division at Goppingen, Germany.

The Sergeant's wife Patricia is with him in Germany.

Information exchange established

JEFFERSON CITY, Mo. (AP) — Missouri has joined seven other Midwestern states in establishing a network for exchange of [illegible] information.

The highway patrol, since Nov. 1, has been hooked into a computer at the Missouri Department of Revenue and can send or receive information from a central computer in Springfield, Ill.

The Automated [illegible] Communications System (ALECS), involves Missouri, Illinois, Indiana, Iowa, Kentucky, Michigan, Ohio and Wisconsin.

Patrol spokesmen said it now takes less than five minutes, and sometimes less than one minute, to get a vehicle report from Indiana, for example.

The fastest service on the network has been from Kentucky, patrol employes say. In the past, it might have taken a half hour or so. The messages were sent via Teletype and the patrol in Indiana would have to obtain the records. Now they're all in computers.

The service has been extended to Kansas City and St. Louis police departments via the Missouri Uniform Law Enforcement System (MULES). Other agencies on the MULES network are indirectly hooked into ALECS via the highway patrol headquarters in Jefferson City.

It works like this, he said:

If a St. Louis policeman wants to check on a car with a Kentucky license plate, he radios his dispatcher, who uses a computer keyboard to talk to the computer in Jefferson City.

The message can be forwarded quickly to the vehicle licensing agency in Kentucky, and the information will go back on the same route to the St. Louis dispatcher in a matter of seconds and be radioed to the trooper on the highway. If the information is on file in the Kentucky computer, no buttons have to be pushed by anyone except the one asking for the information.

The ALECS system is not used for all-points bulletins or descriptions on bank robbers, for example. It is used strictly to obtain information on auto registration and driver's licenses. This information from outside the ALECS network, say from New Mexico, still has to be obtained by Teletype, phone or the FBI's National Crime Information Center in Washington.

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

Daily Standard
Mr. Charles Blanton

We always wee so much bad news in the papers and on T-V today. I thought you might like the chance to print a story with a happy beginning, middle and end. The happy beginning is that the Sikeston Jr. Woman's Club decided to raise money for the pediatrics ward by staging the "Red Stocking Follies." The happy ending is that we did raise a lot of money. But we didn't do it alone and that's where the happy middle comes in. Many people who are not members of our club worked very hard to raise this money. If I may use your media, I would like to thank these "stars" now.

The girls' kicklines practiced every morning for 2½ weeks. The club thanks Doris Jenkins, Kathy Gilmore, Ginger Fisher, Pat McDonald, and Karen Sherman. They made the Rockettes look like amateurs.

Rehearsals were held every evening, too. Our thanks to Kathy Biller, for her voice & humor, to Erma Braswell, Pat Matthews and Lib Alcorn.

And, of course, to the real show stealers, the guys who sang & danced in our couples numbers. An affectionate thanks to Tom Nunnelee, Phil Tidwell Michael King, Eddie Aldrich, Robin Chambers, Tim Chambers, Sonny Alcorn, Eric Pell, Gary Pickett, Dan Norton and particularly Rob Mitchell who drove to St. Louis after each performance for National Guards.

Our thanks to David Boyer and Mel Cokenour for the great work in the skits. Mel not only did a wonderful job in the production, but is the only reigning Maharajah in Sikeston.

And finally, a special thanks to Donny Freeman and Tony Heckemeyer. Danny was a fantastic performer and put in more time back stage than many knew.

Tony was our stage manager, our organizer, our friend — I really don't know what we'd have done without him.

All of the people helped make our happy story. We know they had fun, we all did. Look for us all in the next RED STOCKING FOLLIES — March 1975!

Sincerely,
Kay Fiel
Corres. Sec.

Book Review

YEVTUSHENKO'S READER
by Yevgeny Yevtushenko
Bard
189 pp.)

My grandfather came into the room. I had already undressed and was lying in bed. He sat down on the edge of my bed. He had in his hands a box of liqueur - filled chocolates. He offered me the box of chocolates and then pulled a bottle of vodka out of the pocket of his cavalry breeches.

"I want us to have a drink together," he said.

"You have the candy and I'll have the vodka."

"What shall we drink to?" I asked, trying hard to sound grownup.

"To the Revolution." he said.

I never saw my grandfather again. My mother told me that he had gone away for a long trip. I didn't know then that very night he had been arrested on a charge of high treason.

Poignant memories such as this one are part of A Precocious Autobiography, one of three sections in YEVTUSHENKO'S READER, a Bard book from Avon. Along with his autobiography, the Russian poet also presents The Spirit of Ebe, a discourse on the role of artists in uniting the USA and the USSR; and a collection of his most famous poems, including Babi Yar, Bombs for Balalaikas, and poems from White Snows Are Falling, Yevtushenko's latest book.

Battle Cry

50 m.p.h. speed limit: another Prohibition?

By Tom Tiede

NEW YORK — (NEA) — When the speed limit was reduced to 50 m.p.h. on New Jersey's highways early this month, a policeman stopped a truck driver going a flat-out 75. When the cop reminded the trucker of the energy crisis, the driver snapped: "The hell with the energy crisis, pal, I got a schedule to keep."

So goes the answer to the presidential plea for "some sacrifice by some Americans" during the worsening oil shortage. Authorities in several states report some general slowing down, on a volunteer basis, but, says a highway patrol officer in Pennsylvania, "I wouldn't say the response has been overwhelming."

By all measures, the response to sacrifice must be overwhelming if U.S. drivers are not to be slowed down by something other than speed limit modifications or volunteerism. Dick Rawley of the Federal Highway Administration says that automobiles account for 25 per cent of fuel oil consumption in the nation and stiffer regulations, if they come, will surely be in this oil use area.

There seems no doubt that significant gasoline savings are possible — and with a minimum of public suffering. Gulf Oil research and development engineers, for instance, say that late model engines traveling at 70 m.p.h. average 13.9 miles per gallon of gas vs. 19.6 miles for speeds of 40.

The Highway Administration is even more optimistic about slowdown savings. Thus Norbert Tiemann, the federal highway administrator, believes 50 m.p.h. speeds could reduce fuel use 5 per cent across the nation — enough to compensate for the current U.S. oil production shortfall.

Yet it's apparent there is opposition abuilding to the presidential call for lower speeds. The fact is only too obvious on the roads today. Though auto speed is as risky as it is wasteful (27 per cent of all fatal highway accidents are caused by excessive speed), though the National Safety Council says that a driver's chances of highway death double with each 10 m.p.h. increase in acceleration, Americans zip about with abandon. A recent check of a stretch of the New York Thruway indicated half the cars going in excess of 75; drivers in the rural highways of North Dakota go 90 and 95 without a care.

Some of the opposition to lower speeds, actually, is not real resistance but philosophic criticism. The American Automobile Association, while not objecting to reduced speeds, says that high speeds do not play the major statistical role in the excessive use of highway fuel. Kay Aldus of the AAA says studies indicate 75 per cent of all auto trips are 10 miles or less in distance, therefore "most people don't get up to 70 m.p.h."

The AAA believes that driver skill and mechanical excellence are far better guarantors of fuel economy. A Michigan AAA test indicates that poor driving habits — jackrabbit starts, uneven speeds and needless braking — can be responsible for as much as 44 per cent of vehicle fuel loss. The Minnesota AAA adds that its own studies indicate drivers can cut fuel use 25 per cent (plus save $100 a year in costs) with frequent engine tuneups.

But if the AAA wants mainly to supplement the call for reduced highway speeds, other organizations want only to condemn it. Bus industry spokesmen, as example, say most of their intercity vehicles are engineered for maximum efficiency at 65 m.p.h. Accordingly, says L.H. Warwick, vice president of Trailways: "If our buses run at 50, they'll be in third gear." Warwick's ironic conclusion is that buses use more gas at 50 than 65.

Then there are the truckers. Perhaps the most vocal of the reduced speed opponents. A spokesman for the American Trucking Association says the entire industry has been set up around the 65 m.p.h. speed limit. Terminals are thus far apart, safety regulations (maximum work time for drivers) are so balanced.

"We could live with a 60 m.p.h. limit, but 50 would destroy us," the spokesman says. "It would make one day's trip into two, it would upset everything." And so, adds a driver, angrily, "I don't see the need to slow down and, dammit, I ain't gonna do it."

No one knows for certain, but the belief is the latter opinion dominates the nation. Says a DOT official: "There is no way the American people are going to slow down easily." This official, then, believes the necessary slowdown must come hard:

"You have to hit people in the pocketbook. I believe gas will soon cost 75 cents a gallon, and it will probably be rationed, because that way a man has no choice — he goes slow or he goes broke or he runs out. It's the only way we can get through this period."

Perhaps it is the only way. Then again, the appeal to better judgments, without mandates, is still not dead. The same New Jersey cop who handled the rocketing, recalcitrant truck driver says he's also had to stop an increasing number of people for going too slow! "One lady was doing 25 on the Turnpike. When I told her to go faster she looked at me as if I was unpatriotic."

Triglycerides aren't cholesterol

By Lawrence E. Lamb, M.D.

DEAR DR. LAMB — My doctor says I have triglycerides in my blood. I never heard of it before. What is the difference between triglycerides and cholesterol? I try to keep my weight down and not use too much fats. Please tell me what to do. My old doctor would have explained and told me more, but he left, and I had to get another doctor. He doesn't tell me anything. I'm not afraid to know what is wrong.

DEAR READER — Triglycerides is a scientific name for fats. Most of the fat in our bodies, and that we eat, is in this form. What your doctor is telling you is that you have too much fat in your blood.

Cholesterol is not actually a fat, although it is a waxy material. It is formed by the liver. The liver can make it from too many calories of any type, including carbohydrates and even proteins. Whenever you eat more calories than your body uses, there is a probability that your liver will form excess amounts of cholesterol. You can also get more cholesterol from the food you eat. Egg yolks and organ meats are the most common foods that contain lots of cholesterol.

The cholesterol with the fat forms small particles that can be deposited in the wall of arteries causing atherosclerosis, which leads to heart attacks, strokes, and other problems.

Some people require special care to help control their blood fats and cholesterol. The majority, however, can do much better by decreasing their body fat. This means decreasing the number of calories eaten and increasing physical activity.

You are wise to limit the fat in your diet. You might make a point to include more poultry and fish in your diet and less mammal meat if you tend to use lots of it. You can also use low fat dairy products, such as fortified skim milk and uncreamed cottage cheese. Prepare your foods using corn oil or safflower oil at home. Limit the fatty salad dressings and the fat, high calorie desserts.

And a word about your new doctor. He would probably enjoy talking to you more. Most doctors actually did go into medicine because they enjoy doing things for people. The problem often is that they simply can't. The modern medical system has forced each doctor to see a lot of patients just to keep the office open. I sometimes think doctors have to see too many patients. But, a busy doctor with lots of responsibility can't take the time to explain all about foods and living patterns. If he did, he wouldn't be able to see all of the patients that need to see him. This is too bad because some of these aspects of health care are very important factors in how people get along with their problems. This is why I think we must try to do more to help people help themselves.

Increasing a doctor's responsibility to see more and more patients, even with the aid of computers, new office management, and new expensive equipment is not going to make it any easier for him to have the time to explain a lot or spend much time with each of his patients.

Cooking With Flair--for winter

With holiday entertaining gaining momentum, it's a joy to discover a congenial dessert; one that's easy to prepare and a winner for you, the hostess. Above all, convenience and versatility in foods is a major interest during the holiday rush. This is where Lemon Cloud Pie enters the scene as the perfect compliment to meals.

A tart, refreshing flavor combines with a light texture-- as light as the name "cloud" implies. Even after the most progressive feasting from appetizer through main course, this unique fluffy pie is a pleasant conclusion.

LEMON CLOUD PIE

1 envelope unflavored gelatin
3/4 cup sugar
1/4 teaspoon salt
1 cup water
1/3 cup lemon juice
2 egg yolks, slightly beaten
1- 1/2 teaspoons grated lemon rind
2 cups (or one 4 1/2- oz. container) frozen whipped topping, thawed
1 baked 9- inch pie shell, cooled

Mix gelatin, sugar, and salt in saucepan. Add water and lemon juice. Blend in egg yolks. Place over medium heat and cook, stirring constantly, until gelatin is dissolved--- about five minutes. Remove from heat and add lemon rind.

Chill until slightly thickened.

Place bowl of gelatin in larger bowl of ice and water. Whip with electric mixer or rotary beater until about double in volume.

Blend in 1 1/2 cups of the whipped topping; pour into pie shell. Chill until firm-- 3 to 4 hours. Garnish with remaining whipped topping and a slice of lemon, if desired.

Even Scrooge turned sweet on Christmas day, and our guess is that Mrs. Cratchit helped turn the tide with a special gift-- her own candies-- all wrapped and earmarked for Ebenezer.

Sweets for the sweet is a Christmas tradition. Opera Fudge, Chocolate Creams and Chocolate Circus are wonderful contents for surprise Christmas gifts. All three are made with semi-sweet chocolate.

Have the youngsters help both with the candy- making and the wrappings. Expect some sampling before the packages are ready-- you'll all be sweeter for it!

A Holiday Crown

Holidays may be hectic and especially so when you're entertaining. There may be peace on earth, but there's little to be found in the kitchen around Christmas.

Faced with a round of company holiday dinners, wouldn't it be a timesaver to have a make- ahead dessert-- an impressive one that wouldn't require mastering the art of French cooking in order to create? It's easy when you start with fresh fruit- flavor gelatin and your favorite mold.

Here's the dessert you had in mind. What's more, Christmas colors of pale frosty green and shimmering red contrast to add extra sparkle to your table and to your reputation as a great hostess.

HOLIDAY CROWN

1 package (6 oz.) or 2 packages (3 oz. each) strawberry flavor gelatin
2 cups boiling water
1 1/2 cups cold water
1 package (6 oz.) or 2 packages (3 oz. each) lime flavor gelatin
1/2 cup sugar
2 cups boiling water
1 cup cold water
1 envelope whipped topping mix
*Or use any other red flavor.

Dissolve red flavor gelatin in two cups boiling water. Add 1 1/2 cups cold water. Pour into an eight- cup mold. Chill until set, but not firm.

Meanwhile, dissolve lime flavor gelatin and sugar in two cups boiling water. Add one cup cold water. Chill until slightly thickened.

Prepare whipped topping mix as directed on package; blend into the lime gelatin. Spoon into mold.

Chill until firm-- at least six hours or overnight. Unmold. Garnish with fresh mint or holly leaves and whole cranberries around base, if desired. Makes about eight cups or 12 servings.

Coffee Corner by Cherie

I could swear it hasn't been six months ago that I took down the Christmas tree, and here it is that time again. How fast time flys! I look at Lee and Brete, already half grown, and it seems as though only yesterday they were crawling about on the floor and eagerly awaiting the arrival of Santa Claus. Now, all too soon, Lee is taller than I am, and Santa Claus has long since ceased to slide down our chimney and surprise us with toys on Christmas morning. I find that tucked away amidst all the gaiety and frivolity of this holiday season there is a little sadness now, for too quickly there will be no one under foot driving me crazy with last minute shopping, and cooking, and things to do. Too - too soon they're up and gone and all that's left is the echo of Christmases gone by —

Where did they go
All those years
When did they pass?
We were so young
You and I
They went so fast.
It seems like only yesterday
That we first met
Now here it is tomorrow
And you've filled my heart with sorrow
Where did they go
All those years
We had such fun.
We made such plans
You and I
That never got done.
Our schemes were oh, so grand
The ones we made
Our dreams were full of hope
When did they fade?
Where did they go
All those years
They went so fast
We were so young
You and I
When did they pass.

Head of Teachers College to speak

CAPE GIRARDEAU — The president of one of the most prestigious teacher education institutions in the United States will help Southeast Missouri State University celebrate its centennial early next month.

Dr. John H. Fischer, president of Teachers College at Columbia University in New York City, will speak at a special convocation on the campus Dec. 3.

It was Dec. 3, 1873, that the first classes were held by Southeast Missouri Normal School, an institution create d in the spring of that year by an act of the Missouri General Assembly. Fifty- seven students were on hand.

Today Southeast Missouri State is a university with an all-time high enrollment of 7,669. It offers 12 undergraduate degrees and five graduate degrees, and a student can select from 91 different areas of concentration, including five certificate programs and 15 pre- professional programs.

Teacher education continues to be an important area of emphasis, however, as it has been throughout the university's history, and this is one reason that an outstanding professional educator was chosen to speak on the 100th anniversary of the first day of classes, according to university officials.

The convocation marking the first day of classes will begin at 11 a.m. in the auditorium of Academic Hall, the university's administration building and one of the oldest structures on the campus.

Academic Hall was opened in 1906. It was built to replace the first campus structure, known as the Old Normal Building, which burned in 1902.

Dr. Fischer was born in Baltimore, and he began his professional career there in 1930, serving in several teaching and administrative posts before becoming superintendent of public instruction in 1953. He was appointed a professor of education and dean of Teachers College, Columbia University, in 1959. He became president in 1962.

The educator is currently a member of the boards of Boy Scouts of America, Center for Urban Education, Metropolitan Applied Research Center, New York Foundation, the Institute for Educational Development, Cowles communications Inc. and New York Life Fund Inc.

He has been active in numerous other professional and civic organizations and has served as president of the Maryland State Teachers Association, the Prisoners Aid Association of Maryland and the Baltimore council of Social Agencies. He has also been chairman of the board of trustees of the Educational Testing Service and a member of the Peace Corps Advisory Council.

In 1963, Dr. Fischer was chairman of the United States delegation to the International Conference on Public Education in Geneva, Switzerland, and was chairman of the U.S. delegation to the UNESCO Conference on Youth at Grenoble, France, in 1964.

MIRVing makes talks not worth their salt

WASHINGTON (NEA)

The basic flimsiness of the SALT I U.S.-Soviet disarmament agreement has always been the strongest reason to doubt whether the much advertised detente between the two nations had much real substance.

This is offered to put in perspective the arguments that our recent worldwide military alert at a tight moment in the Middle East war called the depth of detente into question.

Aside from trade approaches clearly much desired by Moscow, SALT I has been the key concrete achievement used to rebut skeptics who argued that detente up to now has been mostly a tossing off of toasts beneath tinkling chandeliers.

SALT I was hailed because it narrowly limited development and deployment of ABM missile defense systems, and also fixed the number of missiles each country could maintain. The Soviet Union was given a numerical and percentage advantage in this accord, on the theory it was necessary to balance the acknowledged greater sophistication of our missile weaponry — especially that in our Polaris-Poseidon submarine fleet.

The joker, of course, was that no limit was placed upon the number of warheads which could be dispatched in a given nuclear missile. Since we were already deploying missiles with multiple, independently-targeted warheads (each missile on a Poseidon vessel has at least 10 warheads), the Russians wanted no ceiling so they'd have a chance to play catch-up.

Yet we, too, saw the advantage of racing on with the multiples (MIRVs). One expert estimates that we will have roughly 10,000 nuclear warheads by mid-1975, and we will not yet be into the era of the new-generation submarine Trident, whose larger, more numerous missiles may carry from 20 to 24 warheads apiece.

Despite our acknowledged advances, we got pretty exercised this summer when we verified that Russia was testing MIRVs on one of its giant, land-based nuclear missiles.

The newest round of SALT conversations is supposed to get around to putting some check on all this. Still, the guessing has to be that agreement will come slowly. Both sides will be rushing to commit themselves irreversibly to MIRVing programs that would have to be accepted as a foundation for any limitations agreement.

The trouble is, as specialist Herbert F. York writes in the November Scientific American, that MIRVing has a whole host of attractions for a major nuclear power.

A missile with many warheads independently targeted is a cheaper device, if the goal is to hit many targets, than a whole array of single weapons separately propelled.

In York's view, sending off a MIRVed weapon which later dispatches several warheads to widely separated points actually goes beyond confusing an enemy's defense and exhausts its capacity to cope adequately with the attack.

If this is truly so, then limitations on ABM's seem generally irrelevant, which casts SALT I in a weakened light and makes the long U.S. fuss over ABM a rather fruitless exercise. York in his article says as much, indicating agreement on ABM limits might not have been attained had there not been what amounts to a MIRV escape clause (the issue is omitted.)

The impression President Nixon sought to convey with SALT I was that we and the world are safer for it. But it is hard to disagree with the contention of York and many others that MIRVing, still open-ended, introduces a crucial element of instability into the nuclear equation.

Prison desegration should not be rushed

JEFFERSON CITY, Mo. (AP) — They sat around a long table in a sweltering room. Whites on one side, blacks on the other. All are convicted criminals — murderers, robbers and burglars.

They have met into the night, sometimes with state corrections officials, trying to figure a way to live together behind the walls of the Missouri Penitentiary.

They are two dozen men, half representing the 800 white prisoners and half representing the 700 or so black prisoners. The century-old penitentiary has six cell halls. Three are occupied solely by whites and three are occupied only by blacks.

That situation doesn't even exist now in Louisiana, Mississippi and Alabama, Quinlan Shea, a lawyer with the Civil Rights division of the U.S. Justice Department, said Tuesday night.

"Everybody's heard about desegration of restaurants and schools, but it also applies to jails," Shea said, telling the prisoners the Civil Rights Act requires desegregation.

Inmate resistance has stalled desegregation efforts at the prison since an attempt to integrate F Hall resulted in a riot, in which a black inmate was stabbed to death, in 1964.

Tensions have been building in the latest attempts to integrate. The highway patrol was alerted last Friday when a rumor circulated that the metal factory, where the state's license plates are made, would be burned down. Nozzles had been removed from fire hoses and paint thinner was stolen.

Monday, after an all-night meeting among inmates, newsmen and corrections officials, three small fires were set but caused little damage.

The negotiation session continued Monday night and George Camp, the 34-year-old corrections chief who came here in July from the New York City corrections system, said he would lift the Friday deadline for voluntary integration if the inmate council could come up with an acceptable plan by Thursday.

Tuesday morning, there was a suspected escape. A prisoner disappeared but officials thought he might be hiding in the penitentiary.

The state's medium security facilities and the prison farms have been desegregated. Camp saved the worst for last. Two weeks ago notices appeared on bulletin boards saying desegregation would begin Nov. 30 and be completed Dec. 15.

"It's not a question of whether we will have integration, but when," Camp said Monday night. "As long as this situation exists, I'm in noncompliance with the law."

While no federal funds have been withheld, Camp said they could be if desegregation were not achieved.

Shea said his fellow attorneys in Washington had nagged him about taking care of the Missouri problem, but he said he convinced the Justice Department to delay in filing a federal suit drawn up last January because Camp and the administration of Gov. Christopher S. Bond wanted a chance to achieve integration voluntarily.

"A court order would be the easiest way out," Shea told the inmates. "But we don't want to have to force desegregation upon you."

"We're for integration, but on a two-week program?" asked Ron Hoelzer, a member of the white inmate council. "We think it's too hazardous to suddenly ship out 50 guys from a hall."

"That's usually the first line of defense," Shea said. "A pilot program would just postpone the inevitable."

White inmates said they would try to prevent violence but had been told the whites would just sit on their bunks and not to go to work if the integration order came.

"Let there be a firm understanding," said Charles Franklin, representing the black inmates. "We will comply. There is no hostility on the part of blacks. We just want to be assured it will be on a 50-50 basis so we can protect ourselves."

The main resistance was in C Hall, which has more than 200 whites, some of whom have been in prison 30 years. Other white cellblocks have agreed to exchange inmates on a 50-50 basis.

Shea said the Justice Department would be satisfied to have desegregation on a basis approaching the population ratio of 52 per cent white, 48 per cent black.

"This is blown all out of proportion," said Richard Stiles, a black from Kansas City who has been in the prison 15 years. "They could do it overnight. All you have to do is pick up and move."

He conceded that many whites would even accept integration of two-man cells, but said "too many don't want a black as a next-door neighbor.

"Listen, my best friend in here is white."

Black and white inmates work together, eat together and watch movies together without any problems, he said.

Asked why they resisted, one white council member said, "You know about the suit at Moberly? That's what they're afraid of."

Earlier this year at the Moberly Training Center for Men, a group of white inmates filed suit, charging that guards allowed blacks to rape and physically abuse young white inmates.

The blacks, on the other hand, say such statements are inflammatory and only worsen the problem.

"If there is any violence, it won't be started by blacks," several black inmates told newsmen.

"Integration is not our main problem," one black said. "Our problem is to get parole and get out of here."

Both sides have taken advantage of the issue to make their grievances known.

The whites want the release of a half dozen whites put in maximum security when they were suspected of causing trouble. The blacks want more black guards. Camp said release of the troublemakers would be up to Associate Warden Donald Wyrick. Warden Harold Swenson has been on sick leave. Camp noted he has hired 10 more black guards since he has been here and will hire four more. Previously, only 2 per cent of the prison staff was black.

Nearly all the inmate council members—white and black— commended Camp for his cooperation in letting them work out their own problems without using force and appreciate his strong views on rehabilitation and improving the corrections system.

The corrections chief has publicly stated he is against the death penalty. He has worked to get higher pay for guards—they start at $448 a month—and for inmate work. The $1 per day limit for prison work has been lifted, but no extra money has been appropriated by the legislature.

Comet now visible to Missourians

Dr. Senne is professor of civil engineering and chairman of that department at UMR and his hobby is astronomy. For a number of years he has provided timetables to Missouri newspapers listing dates and times various satellites can be seen passing over the state.

Dr. Senne says that by Dec. 15, Kohoutek will be a very bright object in the pre-dawn sky. And from that time until Dec. 28, when it will pass behind the sun, those looking for the comet after the sun is up should be very careful not to look directly at the sun.

This comet was initially discovered on March 7 of this year when it was an extremely faint object 368 million miles from the earth. Since that time it has grown steadily brighter as it speeds toward the sun. It is presently within 163 million miles of the earth.

Kohoutek will probably be the most studied comet in history, according to Dr. Senne. Involved in this work will be most major observatories, amateur astronomers, Skylab 3 and Mariner 10 (the newly launched spacecraft now speeding toward the planets Venus and Mercury).

At UMR, a group of physics students plans to make a photographic record of the comet's passage. Members of the Astronomy Club will use various filters when making the photographs in an attempt to determine the spectral content of the comet's emmission.

"There are generally three parts to a comet," Dr. Senne says. "The nucleus, which may be several miles in diameter, is composed of frozen gases, ices and rocky material. The coma is a halo of gases surrounding the nucleus and, in the case of Kohoutek, may measure 100,000 miles or more in size. The tail of a comet is made up of very tenuous gas which is forced away from the direction of the sun by solar radiation pressure and the solar wind. Comet tails vary in length but may reach lengths of over 80 million miles.

"Most comets are associated with the solar system. And since they spend so much time beyond the planets, they may represent material which has remained unchanged since the formation of the solar system," he concludes.

Some of the recent bright comets have been Arend-Roland (1957), Mrkos (1957), Ikeya- Seki (1965) and Bennett (1970). The famous Halley's comet, which was visible in 1910, is scheduled to return in 1986.

Elsberry named Mo. GOP executive director

JEFFERSON CITY, Mo. (AP) — Clair W. Elsberry, 37, Trenton, Mo., took over the Jefferson City headquarters of the state Republican party Monday as the party's new executive director.

Reed was paid $9,300 a year. Elsberry's salary was not divulged.

Elsberry, who grew up in Madison, Mo., is married and has five teen-agers.

Elsberry worked for the state Highway Department in Macon, Moberly and Trenton for 17 years and last year served as Trenton city engineer.

He has been active in the Missouri Jaycees since 1968 and in June of 1970 was honored as one of the outstanding Jaycees in the nation. In February of 1971 he was honored as one of Missouri's five outstanding young men.

Elsberry said his job would include organization, communications and assisting in fundraising.

Welfare added to special session

JEFFERSON CITY, Mo. (AP) — Gov. Christopher S. Bond and legislative leaders have agreed to add a welfare bill to the governor's call for a special legislative session beginning Monday.

The governor met with key legislators Tuesday in what Bond termed a "friendly session."

Sen. William J. Cason, D-Clinton, will sponsor another measure to correct an oversight that the attorney general says will cause Aid to Dependent Children to be cut by $5.

A House bill raised the state pension for the blind from $100 to $110 a month and another House bill increased the Aid to Depdendent Children payments by $5. Both bills took effect Oct. 1.

There are about 74,000 families receiving Aid to Dependent Children payments and 210 persons receiving the pension for the blind.

The attorney general has ruled a Senate bill covering statutes on the blind pension and ADC, but passed to provide welfare payments in other categories, will take precedence because it has a later effective date of Jan. 1.

Therefore, the attorney general said, the payments in effect before Oct. 1 must be paid after Jan. 1. Cason's bill will raise the payments to match the new House bills.

Bond told the legislators he would not speak to a joint session because of space problems, but will issue a written statement.

House Speaker Richard J. Rabbitt, D-St. Louis, said he plans to convene the 162 House members in the House lounge and then recess for committee meetings. There will be one less House member than normal until an election produces a replacement for Republican Ronald Belt of Macon, who was named a circuit court judge.

The House chambers, undergoing renovation, won't be ready for another week.

The governor told the legislators he would make himself available to them more this session, setting aside two hours a day for legislative matters.

Bond and the legislators discussed the other special session items without going into specifics, a governor's aide said. Bond called the special session to consider reorganization of state government, lowering of the speed limit, expanding the merit system and enacting campaign disclosure laws.

Fire destroys Barnett home

Fire destroyed the Joe Barnett home, 838 Wayne St., following an explosion in the home's furnace at 8:43 p.m. Tuesday.

The small frame home was engulfed in flames by the time firemen arrived.

The Barnetts were at a coin laundry at the time of the fire and lost all their possessions. Neighbors told firemen they heard a loud explosion just before seeing the house burst into flames.

The explosion blew out the east wall of the house and forced the base of the other walls outward.

The house was valued at about $14,000.

The Jerry Phillips home next door was also damaged by the fire. The heat from the Barnett house at one point set the Phillips house on fire, but firemen were able to extinguish the flames.

A fireman was involved in a two- car accident at the intersection of East Malone Avenue and Pine Street while en route to the fire.

Volunteer fireman Dennis Overbey, 19, of 534 Carroll St. was westbound on Malone when he struck a car driven by John William Graham Jr., 16, of 614 Dorothy St. which was pulling onto Malone from the northbound lane of Pine.

Graham and his brother Robert, 14, were treated for possible concussions at Missouri Delta Community Hospital and released. Overbey was not injured.

The accident occurred only few feet from the spot where Overbey's father, Volunteer Fire Capt. Leonard Overbey, was killed in June. The elder Overbey was killed in a two- car accident and is believed to have been en route to pick up another fireman to take to a fire.

Firemen are asking that anyone who finds a fireman's helmet to return it to the department. One of the firemen lost the helmet on Murray Lane near the Safeway store while riding on the back of the fire truck to the fire at the Barnett house.

Madrid seeks loan for coal conversion

NEW MADRID — The city of New Madrid is attempting to secure a $20 million Farmers Home Administration loan to build a processing plant that would convert coal to synthetic natural gas, a spokesman for the Missouri Bootheel Regional Planning Commission said Tuesday.

Paul Foster, the commission's program coordinator, said the city, represented by the St. Jude Industrial Park board of directors, filed a "preliminary application" with FHA earlier this month, "and we are expecting a reply momentarily."

The FHA will study the preliminary application to determine whether building the gas plant is feasible, Foster said. Even if the application is approved immediately, it would be nearly three years before the plant would be operational, he said.

The gas plant would be built in the 4,000-acre industrial park just south of New Madrid.

The purpose of the plant, Foster said, would be to produce gas to fuel the industrial park's factories.

The plant's largest customer would be the aluminum mill, which occupies about 1,300 acres in the industrial park, Foster said. Noranda would use about 3.4 million cubic feet of gas per day, "which would mean that some two million

Burglars steal car, church bus to haul safe

Burglars used a stolen car and church bus to carry off a safe from Bridger Plumbing & Heating Co., 607 Davis Blvd.

The burglars broke into the Bridger office through a back door sometime during the night. The burglars, believed to number at least three, loaded the safe into the back seat of a car owned by Tim Ludwig, 819 Davis Blvd. The car was taken from the parking lot of the apartment building in which Ludwig lives.

The safe contained abstracts and business contracts, according to police.

The car was found about 6:40 a.m. today in the parking lot of the Charcoal House Trailer Courts on Highway 61 North.

The thieves apparently abandoned the car and stole a red and white bus from First Church of the Nazarene on highway 61 North, according to police.

The church was broken into and $1 in change was taken. Drawers were ransacked in the office, police said, but the thieves passed up stamps, an adding machine, tape recorder and typewriter.

Police said the burglars had a large dog with them at the Bridger office and the church.

Bluff OKs $3 million for Rowe

POPLAR BLUFF, Mo. (AP) — A $3 million bond issue to finance expansion at the Rowe Furniture Corp., plant here met with overwhelming voter approval in a special referendum Tuesday.

About 90 per cent of those casting ballots approved the measure with 589 voting in favor and 77 against. The proposition needed a two-thirds majority for passage.

Rowe plant president Gerald Birnbach told the Chamber of Commerce Tuesday the expansion could mean an additional 300 jobs for the city.

Rowe currently employs about 350 workers in the Poplar Bluff area. The bonds would not require a tax increase and would be retired by the company as it leased the facility.

23 SHOPPING DAYS TO CHRISTMAS

SeMo educators hear commissioner, legislators

HOWARDVILLE — Teachers, students, school administrators, school board members and interested citizens from 15 Southeast Missouri counties gathered Tuesday at the New Madrid County R-1 Vocational Technical Skills Center for a State Department of Education regional conference.

One of 11 such meetings throughout the state involving about 5,000 persons, the conference was designed to offer the public an opportunity to express views and recommendations for future educational planning and improvements for quality education.

Topics discussed in the day- long session were school classification and accreditation, new high school graduation requirements, greater emphasis on special education, vocation educational and a new assessment program being developed by the State Department of Education for systematically measuring the total development of pupils.

Dr. Arthur L.Mallory, state commissioner of education, attended the meeting and stated at a news conference:

"The matter of quality education is not the same everywhere. I think part of quality and part of excellence is in the individual who wants to seek it."

Others responsible, he said, are the teachers, school board, State Board of Education and the General Assembly.

"We all share the responsibility to deal with the matter of quality education, but I think the way you get at it is to go to the people and earnestly seek their answer to the question: 'What do you want for your kids?' If you get an answer to that and put some of the answer into effect, I think you are doing what you want. You are getting your quality.

"I honestly feel there is no way to run the schools in the state of Missouri at the local or state level without going to the people for their input -- so education can reflect the wishes and needs of the people of Missouri.

"I think it is rather interesting we are getting the same general discussion in southwest Missouri and in northeast Missouri as we got in Kansas City and St. Louis.

Sheriff enroute to Chicago

Scott County Sheriff John Dennis and a witness were enroute today to Chicago to testify at the extradition hearing of James (Peterboy) Harrington, accused of the murder of Kenny Ellison on Sept. 20, 1971 in the Sunset addition.

Prosecuting Attorney Jim Moore said Harrington's defense is based on the claim that he was not in Sikeston at the time Ellison was murdered.

The hearing is scheduled at 10:30 a.m. Tuesday in Chicago.

If extradition is granted, Dennis said he would bring Harrington back with him.

C'ville votes tax hike, bond issue

The sales tax issue carried by a 79 per cent majority while the bond issue was approved by 78 per cent of the voters.

The city sales tax received 668 votes in its favor and 176 against the issue. In the bond vote, 656 were in favor and 185 against the proposal.

The city will use the revenue taken in from the city sales tax to pay for needed capital improvements within the city; namely the sewer system and lagoon.

An ordinance has already been adopted by the city stating that the tax funds will be used for sewer work first, lagoon work second and the balance for other capital improvements.

City Administrator James Bell reported today that the voter turnout was "incredible", considering the bad weather.

High water slows traffic

High water from recent heavy rains made its presence felt as a traffic hazard Tuesday when Tanner Road was half covered by water near its junction with Highway 61. Signs were placed on Highway 61 warning motorists of possible water over the road.

POOR CHARLIE SAYS!

You can strengthen your argument by remaining good natured.

DON'T GO BLIND

It is not too early to start sounding warnings that the event of the "greatest show on earth" to be coming soon, will bring with it certain serious dangers. We speak of the forthcoming spectacular "Comet Kohoutek," due to appear to the naked eye around December first, and to remain visible until the end of January. The new comet, which has already "arrived" for those who have access to telescopes, will be the most dramatic heavenly display since the famous Halley's comet, which last appeared for earth people in 1910.

Comet Kohoutek became first known to us last March when Dr. Lubos Kohoutek, a Czechoslovakian astronomer working at the Hamburg Observatory in Wast Germany, found a bright spot on his photographic plates where nothing had appeared before. Watching the tiny glob of light grow on his telescope day by day, Kohoutek recognized that an enormous comet was hurtling towards our solar system at a speed of better than 100,000 miles an hour. Further calculations showed that should the big comet hit the earth, it would wipe out a city larger than Los Angeles and blast a crater more than 50 miles in diameter.

There will be no danger of collision, however; at the nearest point of approach, around the middle of January, Comet Kohoutek, (named for its discoverer) will be some 75 million miles from earth. Nevertheless, in terms of stellar distances, that is "close." Furthermore, as it zips around the sun like a boomerang and heads back out into space, Comet Kohoutek will be brighter than any star in our heavens, except for the sun. Furthermore, it will have a bright blue and yellow "tail" trailing behind.

What is the danger? Simply this: in late December, when the Comet will be at it's brightest during late afternoon hours, it will be very close to the sun. There is the danger that some people, especially small children, may be tempted to turn their telescopes or binoculars to take a look directly at the sun itself. If one should do that, however, there is the grave danger that the sun will literally burn a hole in the retina of the eye, causing a permanent blind spot.

So, pass the word: enjoy the "greatest show on earth" as Comet Kohoutek pays us a visit, and watch for it in the skies; but never, never look directly the sun.

ALL IN THE GAME?

The late Walter Winchell may have been right when he observed that "the only bad part of being a good sport is that you have to lose to prove it."

Coach George Allen of the Washington Redskins, on the other hand, apparently is out to prove that football and other teams don't have to win or lose to prove they are bad sports. All they have to do is start a fight.

In a recent elevised interview, following a Redskins — St. Louis Cardinals game marred by a free-wheeling brawl Allen expounded his win- at - all - costs philosophy: "I loved the fight. I loved the fight ... and if we didn't go out there and fight I'd be worried. So what if it's a $250 fine, or whatever it is, that's nothing ... the guys who sit on the bench, they're the losers."

Allen, highly successful in the won-lost column, added that when he coached the Los Angeles Rams, "I encouraged a free-for-all ... just to get 'em all together, unless you have that, you aren't going to be a winner. It's all part of winning."

We wager — and we hope — that thousands of other coaches across the country disagree: encouraging fights between competing athletes is not "all part of winning." Surely it is a bankrupt coach who must resort to such tactics to motivate his players.

Brawling by players or fans is not good for sports and most certainly it is not good for society. Scholars tell us that Rome, shortly before its fall, was characterized by the brutalization of its athletic contests. George Allen, and those of like mind, would do well to remember that lesson from history.

THE FALLICIES WE LIBE BY

That We Understand High Prices & High Taxes

A lot of people have an explanation for continuously higher prices and taxes.

But to really understand, says the American Economic Foundation, we must begin with the overwhelming fact that most of the cost of everything is payments for working. There are many types of payments for working, but for convenience let's lump them under PFW.

This is one of those truths which must be accepted without detailed evidence because nothing else could be true. For example, if a billion gallons of rain falls on a given watershed, we know that practically all of it will sooner or later wind up in a given body of water. We know this because, aside from evaporation, there is no other place for it to go.

Similarly, if a billion dollars is spent, regardless of how, practically all of it will wind up as PFW. There is no other place for it to go.

Because this is automatic, our constantly higher PFW, without correspondingly higher productivity, automatically causes higher prices and taxes. There is no stopping it because most of the people doing the work are organized in groups with monopolistic power to get more without doing more work.

By strikes (or "job actions") private and public workers can deprive the economy of essential goods and services. This pressure being irresistible, the PFW rises and enverything, including the cost of government, costs more. This means that new inflationary money money must be pumped into the systems. Two questions arise: 1) Where does this inflationary money come from? and 2) Why?

Where? It comes from increased public debt.

Why? Because if it were not available the increased PFW could not be paid, and massive unemployment would result. This could not be permitted because, by law, the government is committed to full employment (which is considered to be about 95% of the work force).

So, the average PFW in private employment spiraled steadily upward from $4,594 in 1958 to $7,564 in 1970. In government employment it rose from $4,499 to $7,965, according to the US Office of Business Economics. This is the inexorable working of an inexorable truth.

But knowing the truth and doing something about it are two different things.

What are the choices?

We can continue to try to keep it in bounds with loose wage and price controls, and slow down the drift toward ruinous inflation.

We can try (and certainly fail) to enforce tough rigid controls.

We could (but we won't) change the labor laws.

Or, we can launch an enormous adult educational program which could conceivably stimulate the intelligent voluntary self-restraint that is the only answer to stable prices in a full-employment economy when monopolistic groups substantially control their PFW.

A handbook for such an educational effort, "How We Live," is available from the American Economic Foundation, 51 E. 42nd St., NYC, 10017 for $1.00.

SELF-DECEPTION, OR 'THE B. S. FACTOR'

Maybe the reason that Uncle Sam has such a long beard is that when he gets up in the morning he can't stand to look himself in the face and turns the mirror to the wall instead of shaving.

You might do that, too, if you had to worry about Watergate, inflation, energy crises, pollution, Vietnam, drugs, the astronauts and Archie Bunker. Come to think of it, you do have to worry about them.

Which may explain why so many of us —editorial writers most definitely included — resort to talking, writing, acting and generally beating around the bush. The bush being, we have a lot of problems and what are we going to do about them?

Arthur Herzog, sometime journalist and fulltime student of American society, says in his new book, "The B.S. Factor — the theory and technique of faking it in America," that what we are doing is talking ourselves out of our troubles.

At least we are trying to talk ourselves out of them, operating more or less on the theory that a bunch of garbage by any other name might smell a little sweeter.

Herzog has compiled an impressive list of ways in which we refuse to call a spade a spade (or a war a war, or a toilet a toilet).

One of the tendencies he deplores in American life is the implicit blessing people bestow on statements by putting them in quotation marks but (sorry, Arthur) as he says in his book:

"Language becomes a way of adjusting to reality. That reality might be deficient — that is, it might fail to satisfy — but even so the language would tend to adjust. There might be dysfunctions which the language would work to cover up, conceal, in order to avoid disequilibrium, or at least the consciousness of it. The Fake Factor would be a way of hiding our imperfections from ourselves."

Thus, Herzog decries both "Americant," the blind patriotism of those who can find nothing wrong with this country, and "Amerikant," the blind cynicism of those who can find nothing right with it.

He points out our nagging tendency to use such vacant phrases as "genuine leatherette" and "medium premium gasoline."

He gags at the self- styled, publisher- styled "sexperts," whose books and magazine articles lead us down various primrose paths to more glorious, new and improved lovemaking.

And he warns against the dogmatists, who can always be spotted by their use of "without question," "obviously," and "the truth is." ("Never hire a dogmatist," Herzog writes, fang in cheek.)

Herzog's examples, unfortunately, run on and on. From the "uh," "er" and "like" to the finalizing, eventuating jargon that Herzog calls "executalk," there is more than enough evidence to indicate that we would just as soon not look ourselves square in the vocabulary.

How loosely we discuss "summit" meetings, bristling with "pacts" and "communiques" and "understandings." How glibly we toss about words labels: "obscenity," "welfare," "honor."

Instead of being descriptive of actions and beings and qualities, our words are rather symptoms that tell more about our subjective state of mind than they do about objective realities, catharsis instead of communication.

It's true that increased awareness of consumers of their own power has led to such happily sobering steps as unit pricing, which helps one differentiate between the king size and giant economy size. But we are still a nation that loves superlatives, even if we end up with so many things that are the best in their fields that the distinction between best and worst becomes blurred.

Or to put it another way, when it comes to self-deception, we are No. 1.

SUCCESS STORY

In the long run, the best interests of consumers and retailers alike lie in striving for customer service and satisfaction and building volume sales at low markup. A remarkable merchandising success story from the state of Florida illustrates that these long- proven practices, even in these days of inflationary and competitive confusion, are still well and very much alive.

Two years ago, a business executive from Chicago moved to Florida. With no previous retailing experience he decided to open a music store selling only two things, pianos and electronic organs. As he put it, "I have absolutely no experience as a merchant and was relying completely on my instincts as a consumer. Needless to say, I was concerned that the consumer approach to selling might not be enough to pull me through, but now I'm convinced there's no better way." The results speak for themselves. The first 12 - month sales goal of his organization was reached in 60 days. One store has expanded to seven, and sales are expected to exceed $1.5 million in the second year. In addition to selling at competitive prices, dealing in top merchandise and assuring customer satisfaction, one of the first things the new merchant did was to start giving his customers a little something extra -- trading stamps. The stamps, he pointed out, added "... even more value to the dollars our customers spend with us. And they help me keep my volume up."

Boiled down to its essentials the private enterprise, free market economy adds up to a nation of people making their living by working to meet the needs of other people. Advertising and promotion are an essential part of the process. No battery of laws or team of consumer protectors could ever create the flexibility and capacity for consumer satisfaction built into the free market distribution system that we already have.

TWO LIFELINES OF CIVILIZATION

A particularly good picture of the true stature of telephone companies and electric utility companies in the overall economy of a state was provided in an information briefing prepared for media executives in the state of Michigan. It was pointed out that if all the switches were turned off and the electricity and telephones ceased to work for one day, it "... would be equivalent to stepping back a century in time." As far as the future goes, if utilities didn't grow, nothing else could grow either. If we were to freeze the supplies of electric power and communications services at the level of 1973, we would, whether we liked it or not, also freeze the jobs and productive capacity of the nation at that same level. With a growing population this would add up to a steadily declining standard of living for everyone.

In Michigan the two major electric companies and the telephone company are large employers and taxpayers. They expect to invest some $16 billion over the next 10 years in the expansion and improvement of their facilities to meet public demand. Similar massive capital and telephone service have to meet the costs of providing those services and that includes capital costs. If individuals and institutions are to be expected to make their capital available for investment in plant and equipment for utility industries, they will have to be fairly certain of getting a return on their money comparable to what other industries could pay. Despite needed rate increases, the cost of the two lifelines of civilization, electric power and telephone service, remains low in relation to its impact on the average family budget and in comparison to the general trend of inflation. As an example, since 1960, while the cost of housing has risen 44 per cent, food 41 per cent and clothing 35 per cent, the price of basic telephone service on the average is up only 16.3 per cent.

The next time you look at a light switch or the telephone in your kitchen it would be well to think how essential they are to life as we know it. We should remember how much money someone had to invest to put them there and how little the use of them costs when compared with practically anything else we buy.

HERE'S WHAT HAPPENED TO HIM!

Why is it that the nice, sensible guy you elected to Congress seems to go off the deep end shortly after he gets to Babylon on the Potomac? He often takes on an aura of royalty, tells you how to run your affairs and proposes with blithe unconcern new ways to spend tens of billions of your tax dollars.

It is reported that when new members of the House of Representatives go to Washington they find that suddenly they are "... wrapped in a veritable cocoon of privileges and prerequisites — at taxpayer expense ..." To make sure a fledgling Congressman doesn't overlook anything, there is a new 204-page "Congressional Handbook" outlining all of the goodies provided for his creature comforts and working convenience. In the first place, he has a $157,092 a year allowance to hire a 16- member staff to help him run his office in Washington and in his home district. An employment service to find these people is provided free of charge. Provisions are made for every kind of personal service, from legal help to shoe shining, at no cost. Complete facilities and expert assistance are available within instant reach to help with communications to the folks back home — radio scripts, movies, slides, speeches — anything at all. The Congressman's salary, not to be sneezed at is $42,500 a year and to assure that he stays around to a ripe old age, 31 different health plans are available as well as the complete medical services of Walter Reed Army Hospital and Bethesda Naval Hospital.

It's little wonder that that nice fellow from down the block that you sent to Congress fought so hard and valiantly to get the job of representing you and changed so much after he went to Washington. It takes a lot to support a Congressman in the manner to which he becomes accustomed, and it's hard to believe that most of the time we get our money's worth.

BUREAUCRATIC BLOAT

New data just published by the U. S. Census Bureau and analyzed by Harvard Business School Professor Richard Rosenboom show staggering new increases in government employment. Significantly, the greater part of these increases are no longer in federal employment, where we are accustomed to looking for them, but in the payrolls of state and local government.

There was a time when local government, apart from public schools, was considered a single entity. Now, special local government districts proliferate enormously in numbers, cost and staffs, so that there are actually 78,269 governmental units of all kinds in our country today. These employ a total of 13,600,000 civilians, sustained by the productivity of the taxpayers.

Professor Rosenboom shows that industrial productivity has been approximately doubling every 25 years during this century. But the total number of persons employed by government has more than tripled in the past 25 years. Three million more persons are expected to be added to civilian federal, state and local payrolls by 1980.

None of these include members of the armed forces, who are necessary to the defense of our country during these troubled and perilous times.

State and local government payrolls have increased from $30 billion to $85 billion per year in only 10 years. This is the principal reason for recent sharp increases in local taxes. By comparison, government employment and pay scales for Germany and Japan, with their prosperous, booming economies, are much lower. We must call a halt to our own bureaucratic bloat before it bankrupts us. HLH

Hypocritical girls which dress so as to invite men's stares— and then meet them with glares.

Any more cuts in gas for motor cars until they first start rationing fuel for cigarette lighters.

Any more books with titles such as, "I Was a Crooked Cop," "I Was a Dope Addict," or "I Used to Scrub the Bathrooms in the White House."

The black looks you get from a cashier if you pay her with anything larger than a $5 bill.

People who rush out to hoard anything that's in short supply— whether they really need it or not.

Girls who bring you a single daisy on your birthday but expect you to send them a dozen red roses on theirs— and take them out for an expensive dinner, too.

People who are snobbish enough to believe that any wine made abroad tastes better on the palate than any wine made in America.

Women who can tie up a telephone for 45 minutes exchanging the news that there's nothing new in their lives.

The sight of fine old trees blown down during a sudden windstorm.

Neighbors who put off raking their autumn leaves until the wind has blown most of them onto your lawn.

Going to the funerals of acquaintances who take up strenuous jogging after 50.

Ladies who block access to a supermarket checkout counter with their shopping carts while they gallop around collecting eight more items they remembered at the last minute.

Politicians who say a little inflation isn't bad for a country now and then— just so you don't let it get out of control.

From these and other trials of flesh and spirit, deliver us, Amen.

Washington Merry-Go-Round

By Jack Anderson

Butz's Bungles

WASHINGTON — Many factors have combined to send prices skyrocketing in the supermarkets. But the biggest blame falls upon Agriculture Secretary Earl Butz, who has handled the delicate farm controls like the operator of an erratic tractor crashing through a cornfield.

This is the whispered view of Agriculture Department economists, who speak privately of his farm failures as "Butz' bungles." These range from the Russian wheat deal to faulty crop estimates, which have had disastrous results.

The tragedy is that the poor are paying the most for Butz's follies. Buried in his files are grim statistics, which show supermarket inflation has affected basic necessities far more than the luxury items only the affluent can now afford. Many poor families face the prospect of meatless holiday tables during the Christmas season.

Hamburger prices, for example, shot up 41 per cent while sirloin steak rose only 18 per cent. The low- budget meats and poultry jumped a dramatic 50 per cent during the past year. A year ago, chicken cost about 42 cents a pound. Now the price is close to 72 cents a pound, a staggering 71 per cent increase.

FRANKS, BACON, BOLOGNA

Hot dogs have gone up 49 per cent, bologna 36 per cent. Bacon, once a common item, is now a luxury on many breakfast tables. It has shot up 67 per cent.

Substitutes like fish have also been priced beyond the pocketbooks of the poor. Perch fillet has gone up 36 per cent.

In startling contrast, the meats favored by the affluent have risen only an average 25 per cent in price. Fancy cheeses have drifted up 11 per cent. Porterhouse steak has risen 17 per cent. Lobster tail prices have gone up only slightly.

Other staples have registered sharp price increases. Flour is up 36 per cent, potatoes 32 per cent, rice 30 per cent.

A comparison of 13 items reveals that economy foods jumped an average of 31 per cent from September 1972 to September 1973, as compared to an average gain of only 21 per cent for their luxury counterparts. While margarine increased 24 per cent, for example, the mark-up for the "high- priced spread" was only 15 per cent.

The reasons for the price rocketing, of course, are complex. But economists, who work for Butz, lay the heaviest blame on his inept handling of the agricultural economy.

FAULTY ESTIMATES

All year long, for example, the Agriculture Department has put out inflated crop estimates. The economists suspect the faulty estimates have been influenced by the Administration's eagerness for good news.

But the eventual result has been bad news. The high estimates caused prices to drop briefly. Then the low prices increased the demand. By the time the Agricultue Department got around to straightening out the figures, prices would zoom back up to even greater heights.

This happened with cattle, corn and pigs. Butz predicted a six per cent increased in pig production. Instead, there was a two per cent decline.

Similarly, a staggering five million head of cattle, which Butz had mistakenly counted, never made it to market. An anticipated increase in dairy production also never materialized. All these miscalculations helped to drive up prices.

Butz's biggest bungle, of course, as the Russian wheat deal. His poor appraisal of the world demand for wheat led him to sell one-quarter of the U. S. crop to Russia for $1.63 a bushel. By the time the last bushels had squeezed through the clogged transportation system, the price had soared to nearly four dollars a bushel.

INFLATION IMPACT

The vacillating farm policites also had an inflationary impact upon prices. Rumors that price regulations would be implemented at the farm level discouraged production and the resulting cutbacks sent prices up.

When controls were slapped on beef prices, livestock producers withheld their beef from the market and caused a price rise. The Administration also threatened to curb exports, then decided against it, all to the detriment of consumer prices.

The failure to do anything about the bogged transportation system, which slows down the delivery of food, also had an effect on the market. The Administration also refused to control the wild speculation in commodities, which helped to drive up prices.

The results were predictable: higher prices for supermarket shoppers, particularly the poor. Some low-income families and elderly people on fixed incomes have been reduced to buying dog food for their dinner tables; For these people, Butz' bungles will bring a bleak holiday season.

Footnote: An official spokesman denied that Butz had mismanaged agricultural affairs. The spokesman contended that price controls, rather than overestimated crop reports, had caused dislocations on the farm. The wrong estimates, he argued, had "a minimal effect" on production and prices. He blamed the rise in food prices upon inflation, pointing out that nonfood prices had risen, too. He defended higher food prices, saying it was time the farmers got their fair share of the food dollar. He declined to be drawn into a discussion of whether food processors and packagers, rather than the farmers, were getting the biggest benefits from price increases.

Rationing plan explained

WASHINGTON (AP) — The White House proposed a heating oil rationing plan Tuesday under which home owners using oil must lower their thermostats six degrees. All others using oil for heat must lower their thermostats ten degrees.

Here, in question and answer form, is an explanation of the plan, subject to official revision before its final adoption.

Q. Does absolutely everybody have to lower his heat?

A. Not everybody. Just householders and building operators who heat with "middle distillate fuel" that includes the usual "Number Two" home heating oil, kerosene, range oil, stove oil and diesel fuel. Those who heat with natural gas, electricity, wood or some other fuel are requested to cut their fuel consumption but are not legally required to do so.

Q. If I have to reduce my heating by government order, why don't those others?

A. Oil is a heating fuel whose deliveries can be controlled. It is much more difficult, in fact nearly impossible, to cut deliveries of electricity and natural gas for heating without creating serious problems and safety hazards. The administration is studying ways to cut the use of electricity and natural gas, possibly by imposing some sort of tax or surcharge on excess consumption. But it has not yet come up with a plan.

Q. What right does the government have to tell me how to heat my home?

A. It has the legal authority, based on 1973 amendments to the 1970 Economic Stabilization Act — the "Eagleton Amendment" — to control the distribution of fuels. It has been controlling distribution of home heating oil at the wholesale level since Nov. 1. Now, it plans to extend that control to the final consumer.

Q. Why is this necessary?

A. Because the United States has been increasing its fuel demand faster than its supply. The Arab oil nations made our problem worse by cutting off their shipments of oil to the United States last October. Thus, the consumption of all petroleum products — gasoline, home heating oil, industrial oil diesel and jet fuel — must be cut.

Q. I wouldn't mind turning down the thermostate a degree or two, but why six degrees?

A. That's what the government figures it will take to save about 15 per cent of the distillate oils: a six-degree reduction in homes and ten degrees everywhere else.

Q. President Nixon said Sunday night we should lower the heat six degrees to an average indoor temperature of 68 degrees. We always keep the thermostat at 68. Must we cut back?

A. Yes. You will have to turn your thermostat down to 62. The regulation says: "Each end-user must reduce his ambient indoor temperature by the appropriate amount, or take actions which will result in a fuel saving equivalent ..."

Q. Who's going to make me?

A. Nobody. But if you don't do it, you'll run out of fuel on a cold day.

Q. But my dealer makes sure my oil tank is full.

A. He won't in the future. The first delivery he makes under this program, he will fill up your fuel tank. After that, he will figure out how much is needed to refill it, but he will subtract six degrees' worth of fuel. It's up to you to make it last until the next delivery.

Q. If my dealer has to cut me back six degrees, how will be know where I set my thermostat last winter?

A. He doesn't have to know that. He knows how much fuel you used in December and January, because he sold it to you. He can figure out how much fuel your house used on a cold day a year ago, and, based on the current weather, he can figure out how much fuel your home would normally have used. Then he would subtract enough fuel for six degrees of heating, and deliver the result.

Q. What if I own a new house with oil heat and don't have a dealer or a record of a normal fuel use?

A. Each state is expected to set up local boards, appointed by each governor, to assign dealers to new customers. The regulations say new oil heaters will be allowed to operate at normal levels for a while to establish their performance, and then will be cut back six degrees or ten degrees like everyone else.

Ann Landers

Dear Ann Landers: Since I am a transvestite I know more about the subject than you do. If you are willing to learn, please read on.

It's difficult (maybe impossible) for a male who doesn't have the urge to dress in women's clothes to understand what this does in the way of "relaxation" and exhilaration. I have been doing it for 35 years and I can tell you there is no feeling to equal it.

When I first started to dress up I was about 17. I used to "borrow" my mother's clothes until I could afford to buy my own wardrobe. I pretended I was Billie Dove, Beebe Daniel, Nancy Carroll or Clara Bow--- depending on my mood. This isn't the same as a person who believes he's Napoleon. I always KNEW who I was, but it was fun pretending.

In those flights of fantasy I was able to relax completely. A couple of hours of make-believe was like a weekend in the country.

No one can tell by looking at me that I am a transvestite. There isn't a single clue that might give me away. So, Ann, tell your readers that they never know who is doing what in his spare time. The man you least suspect probably is.--- This Week You Can Call Me Liz

Dear Liz: Thank you for an illuminating glance at life as some people live it. If dressing up in women's clothes does as much for you as a weekend in the country, it's O. K. with me. Stay home and enjoy yourself. There are too many people on the highway anyway.

Dear Ann Landers: It's too late to do anything about it this year but I hope you will print my letter so I will know what to do next November. My husband and I have been married seven years and we have spent every Thanksgiving with his folks.

I feel just terrible about this because I am the only one of five married children who has yet to be seated at our family's Thanksgiving table. Furthermore, my parents are in their 70s and my husband's parents are in their 50s. Without coming out and saying it, you know what I'm thinking.

Thanksgiving dinner at my in-laws' is a social affair. There are always several business acquaintances and golf and canasta friends. They cocktail it up for at least an hour before dinner. By the time we sit down everyone is pretty well plastered. No one says a prayer of Thnksgiving. It might as well be Hallowe'en.

Every year I have gone home depressed--- with a sick headache. But I don't seem to be able to win this battle. I've been tempted to tell my husband that he can go to his folks and I'll go to mine, but I just can't bring myself to do it. Married people belong together on Thanksgiving. I need your help, Ann.--- Gobbled Up

Dear Gobbled: You don't say where you go for Christmas. Sometimes couples who have this problem compromise. Start in July of next year to condition your husband to the idea that next Thanksgiving is going to be spent with your parents. If he hasn't agreed by November 15, tell him you are going to your parents' home and he can go to his. I agree that married people should be together on Thanksgiving, but circumstances alter cases, and your situation is definitely out of the ordinary.

Confidential to Love Him Or Leave Him: You're going to have a hard time "leaving" a man who has already left you. Call it "love" if you want to, but any resemblance to love and what goes on between you two is purely miraculous.

Ann Landers discusses teen-age drinking--- its myths, its realities. Learn the facts by reading, "Booze and You--- For Teen-Agers Only," by Ann Landers. Send 35c in coin and a long, self-addressed, stamped envelope to Ann Landers, P. O. Box 3346, Chicago, Ill. 60654.

CAPE GIRARDEAU--Gold palm stands filled with mixed greenery, white pompom chrysanthemums and two white love birds were balanced by twin candelabras on either side to form the altar setting for the wedding of Miss Patti Jeannie Palsgrove and David Russell Jones at First Christian Church on Nov. 3.

Windows on each side of the sanctuary held single candles decorated with white satin bows and greenery; and the candelabras and center aisle were also marked with white satin bows.

The case of the overstuffed house

By Jack Strauss, LL.B.

When Oscar died, it was commonly believed that his only asset was his old house. And while old houses usually come from the same mold, his house was moldier than most. Consequently, after buying it, the first thing Wilbur did was to start cleaning it up.

While doing so, to his great surprise, he found an assortment of valuable securities tucked away in old books, bureaus, mattresses, etc. Needless to say, he was extremely overjoyed but he wasn't nearly as overjoyed as Oscar's daughter who immediately claimed the securities as part of her late father's estate.

"Baloney," responded Wilbur. "When I bought the house, the deed specifically included all of its contents. That not only included books, bureaus, mattresses, etc., but all the stuffings."

"Baloney to you sir," retorted the daughter. "You were sold a house and contents, but not a fortune in securitiies. While you may be plucky, you're not that lucky."

Whereupon, Oscar's determined daughter sought to recover the securities in court.

IF YOU WERE THE JUDGE, would you permit Wilbur to keep the stuffings?

This is how the judge ruled: NO! The judge held that when a house and its contents are sold, "contents" generally refers to objects of furnishings and household goods that are normally found in a house and which are frequently sold as part of the property. Items of personal property, noted the judge, do not pass to the purchaser in the absence of an intent to that effect. In this case, concluded the judge, there was no intent that Wilbur was to acquire ownership of the valuable securities.

Prayer for today

from the Upper Room

Martha, Martha! You are worried and troubled over so many things, but just one is needed. Mary has chosen the right thing, and it will not be taken away from her. (Luke 10:41- 42)

PRAYER: O God, may we strive always to have kind thoughts of others, to give them the benefit of any doubt, to put ourselves in their place, and try to understand them better. Amen.

Energy crisis not expected to have much effect on Mo. tourism

SPRINGFIELD, Mo. (AP) — The energy crisis won't hurt Missouri's tourism business as much as many other areas, Steve Kappler of the Missouri Tourism Commission believes.

"We are in a central location within a short driving distance of a lot of people," he said Tuesday. "People are reluctant to reduce their leisure activities."

About 150,000 persons are employed in the state tourism industry and the payroll is about $720 million annually, he noted.

"We think people are going to take their vacations, but they will stay closer to home," Kappler said. "That puts Missouri with its central location in a good location."

However, Ron Conn of Silver Dollar City near Branson takes a different view. He said a 35 per cent drop in attendance was expected and the winter labor force of 320 was reduced by 83.

Fuel shortage causes major layoffs before Christmas

WASHINGTON (AP) — The fuel shortage has begun taking its toll on jobs, putting thousands out of work before Christmas in the first of an expected series of major layoffs that may push unemployment up sharply.

Layoffs are reported in the auto, chemical, construction and textile industries.

Frontier Airlines is furloughing 150 workers. Meanwhile, the nation's largest carrier, United Air Lines, announced it would begin layoffs for at least 950 employes Jan. 7.

Economists and labor leaders say it is still too early to determine the full impact of the energy crisis on jobs.

The nation's jobless rate had been anticipated to rise next year as the nation's economic growth slowed, and the fuel shortage now is expected to add to it.

Some private economists have forecast an unemployment rate next year of anywhere from 5 to 8 per cent, compared to the current rate of 4.5 per cent.

A rate of 6 per cent would throw an additional 1.3 million Americans out of work on top of the 4.1 million now without jobs.

But President Nixon's Council of Economic Advisers has challenged the higher forecasts and has scheduled a news conference Thursday to declare that the energy crisis will have no massive impact on the economy and unemployment, it was learned.

Sources said that the council will say they expect the unemployment rate will not reach 6 per cent next year.

Labor leaders, mindful of the administration's optimistic forecasts earlier this year on bringing inflation under control, remain unconvinced.

"We're worried about it and are watching the situation," said an official of the Oil, Chemical and Atomic Workers union in Denver. "We're convinced there's going to be shortages of petrochemicals," and this will affect jobs in, among others, the fertilizer, chemical, cosmetic and pharmaceutical industries, he said.

Government prepares to take control of petroleum sales

WASHINGTON (AP) — Gasoline rationing is looming a step closer as President Nixon's Cabinet-level energy group has soured on fuel-saving tax ideas.

"Almost everybody is leaning toward rationing," an administration source said, describing the attitudes expressed in a meeting Tuesday of the Emergency Energy Action Group assigned by Nixon to recommend energy-crisis policy.

The source said even Treasury Secretary George P. Shultz, the strongest advocate of a gasoline tax to avoid rationing, was "not all that firm" for taxes in the meeting.

But the group has not yet made up its mind and was to discuss the issues again Thursday, the source said.

"What Shultz really would like to do is take the lid right off gasoline prices," the source related, but he said neither Shultz nor anyone else thought this should be done as long as there is a gasoline shortage.

Unlimited prices, he said, would only open the way for oil companies to roll up windfall profits by overcharging customers in a shortage market.

The notion of imposing a tax of 30 to 40 cents per gallon, to discourage unnecessary gasoline use had some appeal, but the source said the Cabinet group appeared to be reaching the conclusion a tax would take too long to clear Congress and would act too slowly to cut gasoline use.

Although President Nixon said Sunday night that gasoline supplies will be reduced 15 per cent to increase the supplies of other petroleum fuels, the administration's crisis strategy calls for a 30 per cent gasoline cutback.

And administration sources said Tuesday the cuts probably will be increased to 30 per cent over the next several months.

Pediatrics receives $2,000

The Sikeston Junior Woman's Club today presented to the pediatrics department of Missouri Delta Community Hospital a check for $2,000.

Most of the money was raised from a club fund drive which included the Red Stocking Follies and the Maharaja contest.

In addition to the funds raised by the drive, about $200 was added from the club treasury.

$45 in change stolen from car

Police today were investigating the theft of $45 in change from the glove compartment of a car belonging to Miles Ward, 1506 Osage St.

Ward told police he was loading his car in front of his house Tuesday when he stepped into the house about 9:35 p.m. When he came back out, he said, he saw three youths taking the money out of the glove compartment.

MASH returns to screen

Hailed as "the best American war comedy since sound came in", "M*A*S*H", 20th Century- Fox's irreverent look at war, returns Friday to Malco Twin Cinema II. Donald Sutherland, Elliott Gould, Tom Skerritt, Sally Kellerman, Robert Duvall and Jo Ann Pflug star in the Panavision, deluxe color production.

Gould and Sutherland are Army surgeons who develop a lunatic lifestyle in order to function and keep their sanity amid the everyday horrors encountered in a mobile Army surgical hospital (M*A*S*H) during the Korean War. They are skilled and dedicated in their profession, but they are equally skilled in making a shambles of Army bureaucracy.

Among the performers who share or are victims of their antics at the Army base are Sally Kellerman, the rigidly strict head nurse whom they transform into a warm human being; Robert Duvall, the overly pious major; Jo Ann Pflug, another nurse, succinctly described as "the sexiest in military history;" and Rene Auberjonois, the compassionate chaplain.

The pro gridders, most of whom have since retired, were assembled by former Kansas Clity Chiefs all- pro defensive halfback Fred Williamson.

Involved in the "game", in addition to the stars, were Howard Williams and Ben Davidson of the Oakland Raiders; Jack Concannon, John Myers and Tom Woodeschick of the Philadelphia Eagles; Timmy Brown of the Baltimore Colts; and Buck Buchanan and "Supergnat" Nolan Smith of the Kansas City Chiefs.

The author is one of the nation's leading surgeons, which explains his lucid handling of his characters' vocation and, due to the rigid proprieties of his profession, may well account for his reticence to be identified with his daring, far- out theme.

Both Gould and Sutherland went on to super- stardom after M*A*S*H and are currently reteamed in the forthcoming "Wet Stuff", which takes on the CIA.

Gould's roster of films includes "Getting Straight"; Ingmar Bergman's "The Touch" (he was the first American to work with Bergman); "The Long Goodbye", in which he played Raymond Chandler's sleuth, Philip Marlowe, for director Robert Altman; and "Busting", in which he played a vice cop.

Sutherland has starred in "Kelly's Heroes"; "Little Murders" (with Gould); "Alex in Wonderland"; "Klute", opposite Jane Fonda; "Steelyard Blues", also with Miss Fonda, "Lady Ice"; and "Don't Look Now", a British production co- starring Julie Christie.

Miss Kellerman's latest starring role was in "Slither", with James Caan. Duvall is still remembered for his performance in "The Godfather".

The movie is in color and rated G (suitable for general audiences).

Now playing at the Malone Theater downtown are "Vampier Circus" and "Countess Dracula", both in color and rated G.

A special children's matinee, "Puss and Boots", will be shown at 2 p.m. Saturday. Beginning Sunday will be "Detroit 9000", starring Alex Rocco. The movie is rated R (restricted, persons under 17 admitted only with parents' approval).

"Jesus Christ Superstar" ends Thursday at Malco Twin Cinema II to make way for "M*A*S*H".

It's remarkable how many people will drive carefully 200 miles or so to break a leg skiing.

Few advisory services make recommendations

By CROCKETT SCOTT

There may be lots of bargains around in the stock market these days on the basis of fundamentals such as price- per- share in relation to sales and earnings, but few advisory services are making recommendations.

One of those which is making specific recommendations is Moody's Stock Survey. Here are the survey's selections and comments:

"Certain- Teed Products: A squeeze on profit margins held the gain in third quarter net to only three per cent, despite a 23 per cent advance in sales. Shortages of raw materials and energy were factors, as were sharply higher interest charges and the price- control barrier to price increases.

"Primary earnings per share were unchanged at 70 cents, from one year ago, because of conversions of preferred stock that increased outstanding common. Fully diluted earnings were up five per cent, to 66 cents. We expect primary earnings to amount to $2.30 a share this year, and only a modest gain next year. Nonetheless, with its good longer term prospects, we continue to consider the medium grade stock a buy for appreciation.

"Crown Cork & Seal: Results came in about as had been expected for the third quarter, with profits up eight per cent year- to- year, on 14 per cent higher sales. Nine-months earnings rose 10 per cent on 14 per cent more volume. With about 750,000 fewer shares outstanding, per-share earnings for the nine months were up 15 per cent to $1.38.

"Crown has bought more of its stock since the end of September. We expect Crow's earnings to gain about 10 per cent next year from an estimated $1.80 a share this year. The medium grade common is still a buy.

"Hudson Bay Mining & Smelting: Booming copper and zinc prices and strong demand for fertilizer products here and abroad are contributing to an excellent performance by Hudson Bay Mining & Smelting this year. Profits, before an extraordinary item, soared 181 per cent to $2.86 a share for the first three quarters of 1973, from one year earlier, on a 65 per cent advance in sales. We now estimate that the company will earn in excess of $3.75 for the year, and prospects for further gains are excellent next year.

"With bright longer range prospects for Hudson Bay's diversifying mining interests, the investment grade stock is still a buy.

Two out of three Americans living today will live to see the 21st century. In fact, the newborn child on the opposite page will be just 27 years old by the year 2,000. She will live two thirds of her entire life in the next century.

At Metropolitan Life, we recognize that the future is not as far off as we sometimes think. We also recognize that to serve your interest best, we must anticipate the future. Project ourselves into it. Try to identify problems that may not even exist today. And start looking for solutions today — not tomorrow.

So we're preparing for the future now. We're doing many things that can make your future and your children's future easier, safer and more satisfying.

For example, Metropolitan Life is working with the medical profession on ways to improve your medical care — and to make the best possible care available to everyone at reasonable cost now and in the future.

Future generations will be the direct beneficiaries of our many medical and health education programs.

We're also anticipating the future in many other areas important to you, such as education, retirement and housing. For instance, the housing we invest in must not only be livable today — but also 50, 60, and 70 years from now.

We've been thinking harder than we've ever thought before about the future and how it will affect you and your family. We believe we've gained new insights, new ideas and we've developed new approaches.

But most of all, our studies have made us realize the urgency of preparing for the future now because the future is now, Today. One second from now.

And that's why we're ready to help you now. At Metropolitan Life, we're ready with imaginative and farsighted policies and programs for the future.

Once you talk to your local Met Life representative, we think you'll agree he understands your plans and hopes for the future.

We think you'll also agree he can help you prepare for the future.

Foster said the surplus either would be purchased by the electric generating plant that supplies electricity to Noranda, "or it could be purchased by any new industries that move into the park."

People still have about the same concern. They're interested in their youngsters learning a value system. The parents want their kids to have values -- such values as integrity and honesty, the work ethic: you work for what you get and work has dignity. These conversations crop up in every part of the state. We are getting the same kind of input in a number of areas in the state."

Continuing, Dr. Mallory said he thinks every youngster in the state of Missouri ought to be good at five things.

"I think he ought to be able to read. I think he ought to be able to handle the English language in spoken and written form. I think he ought to be able to figure simple interest. If he can figure simple interest, he can buy and he won't get taken quite so much.

"I think he ought to understand the economic system which has made America a great system, and I think he ought to know something about the government of this land, and how to work within this system to make it better.

Now if we can have those basic things known by everybody, then you can move into any area you want to and be a contributing citizen, I think."

Dr. Mallory said that a new improved classification accreditation procedure for schools has been implemented by the State Department of Education as a result of the 1971 statewide conferences.

The new procedure allows more flexibility at the local district to take care of individual differences, he said.

In 1972, regional conferences centered around school finances, Dr. Mallory said, and the type of programs the people wanted for their schools. Listed were college preparatory courses, vocational technical training and special education.

As a result of the input by citizens during the 1972 educational conferences, Dr. Mallory pointed out that Missouri House Bill No. 474, providing for special education and also the academically talented student, was passed by the General Assembly.

The bill, he said, is being hailed across the nation as one of the outstanding pieces of special education legislation in the nation.

Dr. Mallory also noted that the General Assembly has nearly doubled its efforts for vocational technical programs.

Other educational programs that are attracting attention, according to Dr. Mallory, are individualized instruction, early childhood education to offset possible educational deprivation in some of the homes and a new assessment system under development to evaluate the schools at the district level to determine if they are meeting learning objectives set by Missouri citizens.

Dr. Mallory spoke enthusiastically about an early childhood learning program in the Ferguson-Florissant district. The program involves the parents, teacher and student in the home as well as the classroom in educational activities and experiences useful to individual students.

State Sen. Nelson B. Tinnin of Hornersville briefly commented on the value of vocational- technical training and the necessity of such education for students to be productive who do not pursue a college degree.

The skilled worker, he said, very often ranks the same or above a college graduate on the salary scale.

Concerned over the school classification procedure, now in use was expressed by State Rep. Vic Downing of Bragg City, who said he had heard criticism that classification had been based more on input than output by the schools.

"We hear a lot about testing, evaluation and accountability," Downing said.

He stated that he thinks consideration should be given to the criteria used for teachers' salaries.

In most districts, he said salaries are based on the number of college hours a teacher has and that some teachers, which he believes to be a minority, are not doing as good a job as others, yet they receive the same salary.

Stage set at BHS

BERNIE-- The stage is set for Thursday night's semifinal round of the 14th annual BHS Invitational basketball tournament after pre- tourney favorites, Parma and Risco, claimed wins Tuesday.

Parma started the evening with a narrow 73- 71 decision over the Bloomfield Wildcats and Risco followed with a 72- 63 victory over Richland.

Thursday's schedule matches Gideon and Puxico in the opening game at 7 p.m. and Risco and Parma in the 8:30 nightcap. All four teams were among the top four seeded in the event.

Tuesday night Bloomfield narrowly missed the biggest upset of the event when the hustling Wildcats fell two points short of knocking off the second seeded Pirates.

Parma sped to an 18 point lead and seemed headed for a route, but the scrappy, sharp shooting Wildcat team stormed back and stayed within striking range of the talented Pirate quintet until the final buzzer.

Bloomfield completely out- played their taller opponents and gave up the victory at the charity line where the Pirates held a 11- 7 advantage. The Wildcats outshot the PHS cagers 32- 31 from the field.

Bloomfield was led by John Nelson with 20 points. The sharp- shooting BHS forward provided the spark that ignited the Wildcat rally, and kept it going with his deadly shooting. Gary Johnson had 16 and Steve Rushin added 16 to the BHS total.

Risco had a little easier time than did their neighboring New Madrid county neighbors, romping to a 21- 12 lead in the first quarter and adding to that margin the next two quarters on the way to their 72- 63 victory.

Richland made a fourth quarter charge at the Golden Tigers, out- scoring them 23- 13, but the damage had already been done.

Steve Landers, showing a deceptive move under the basket, led all scorers on the night with 28 points for the Tigers. David Noyes had 15 and Robert Hester 14 to lead the Rebels attack.

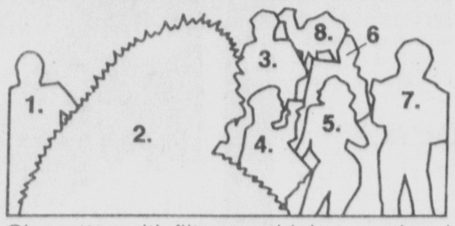
Can you spot the Camel Filters smoker?



Even at the Zoo everybody has a gimmick . . . almost everybody. Find the one who doesn't. 1. No. He's Miles Tugo, underwear salesman pretending he's a jogger. Gimmick: Cigarettes with filters so thick every time he inhales, his ears pop. 2. Meet Livingston I. Presume, gorilla. A latent Homo Sapien, who throws tires at anybody who doesn't believe in Evolution. 3. Nope. He's Jerry Bilt, zoo painter. Holds gimmick: A long pole to paint ape's cage (says he's allergic to fur and having his leg pulled off). His Maxi-Long cigarettes easily break in half, too. 4 & 5. No and no. They're Sam and Janet Evening, movie team making a low budget jungle picture: "King Kong Gives Detroit A Hickie." 6. He's Skip Tickel. Was given this address to deliver 12 Chinese dinners. Gimmick: Smokes cigarettes with filters so hollow he talks with an echo. 7. Right. He prefers wildlife to wild gimmicks. Wants no nonsense in his cigarette, either. Camel Filters. Good taste. Honest tobacco. 8. No. It's either the symbol of a high-quality cigarette, or a high-rise sheep.

Camel Filters. They're not for everybody (but they could be for you).

by Ron Jaynes

The Old Pro picked the most correct games this season but he will still be unable to gain the coveted crown of Top Predictor. Sportswriters Stuart McGhee and Dianne Ezzell finished ahead of the pro with 83 and 81 percentages to his 79.

Among the guest prognosticators, John Greer came in first with 77% of his predictions coming true. Danny Summerfield, who led the pack for most of the season, finished with a 75% mark. Jerry Gentry complied a 60-81 season to finish with a 74% mark. Bobby Gentry and Mike Gentry tied with 72% and Eddie Smart, the only other regular guesser finished with a 67% average.

FINAL STANDINGS

| Stuart McGhee (9 weeks) | 59-71 | 83% |
| Dianne Ezzell (10 weeks) | 62-77 | 81% |
| Ron Jaynes | 64-81 | 79% |
| John Greer | 62-81 | 77% |
| Danny Summerfield | 61-81 | 75% |

| OTHERS | | |
| David Ziegenhorn | 7-10 | 70% |
| Tony Ford | 33-45 | 63% |

After missing the Dexter- Malden game and the Meadow Heights-Greenville verdict Bill "Mr. Basketball" Harrison's percentage was lowered a bit but sometimes the players and coaches don't cooperate too well.

There's not much action Wednesday night so maybe I can make another one hundred per cent.

Woodland Invitational — Zalma vs. Meadow Heights — The Panthers are too tall for the Bulldogs so the Panthers will triumph — 70-60.

Leopold vs. Woodland — The Cardinals will make easy work of these visitors — 75-57.

Sikeston Invitational

Mac optimistic

Coach N. P. McDaniel is very optimistic concerning the 1973- 74 basketball season as his Sikeston Bulldogs have turned out for practice in full force and are preparing for their opening season clash at the Bulldog Mini-dome Friday night against Blytheville, Ark.

The Bulldogs always have to wait until the football season is closed before the roundball practice can get into full swing as some of the basketball players participate in football.

The Bulldog coach received considerable criticism through the first half of last season but after Pope Hunt became eligible at mid- season Sikeston won 10 of their last 13 games after a terrible 0-10 start. The Bulldogs finished 10-13 and entered first round play of the class L state tournament after upsetting the highly rated Cape Central Tigers.

"We're looking hopefully forward to a good season", commented coach McDaniel. "The eighth grade will definitely help our program. The boys will learn the fundamentals before they become freshmen," he said.

For the first time in the history of Sikeston Basketball the Bulldogs will begin their season in November as Blytheville, Arkansas visits the field house Friday night, November 30.

"We visit three states this season as we have some top clubs on our schedule," coach McDaniel said. "We play Collierville, which was one of the Tennessee state champions last year." Meridian, Ill. is always a good Illinois club each year."

Coach McDaniel has eight returning lettermen to put together a winning combination this season. Three returning starters give coach Mac a bright outlook for the upcoming year. Roy Bowman, a 6-1 senior, Mark Couch, a 5-10 guard and Ronald Marks, a 5-10 guard have enough experience and shooting ability to make the Bulldogs a winner.

Newcomers that should help the Bulldogs considerably are junior Vangalee West, who missed last season after starring on the freshman team. Roger Tillman, a 6-3 junior and Howard Tate, a 6-3 junior will give Sikeston enough height to compete. Tillman has injured his leg and will miss the Blytheville encounter but is expected to be back in time to play in the Sikeston Invitational tournament beginning December 3rd.

At this time the fifth spot on the Bulldog starting team is wide open as Tillman and Tate are battling for the honor.

Senior Donnie Taylor, a 5-10 guard and 5-11 James Bryant are expected to see a lot of action for the Bulldogs as the season progresses.

"We don't know anything about Blytheville at this time, but they have always had big clubs before," commented coach Mac.

The eighth grade had 36 participants aiming at a starting berth for coach Mike Foster. The Freshman turnout was very good with some very good prospects as coach Kinneman is busy putting together the first five players.

Lilbourn tops poll

The undefeated Lilbourn Panthers, winners of the North Pemiscot Invitational tournament title and top seeded for next week's Sikeston Invitational, head up the Daily Standard's first regular season basketball ratings as chosen over the weekend by the 15- member panel of coaches.

Holding down the number two spot is the Panthers New Madrid county league rivals, Matthews Pirates, who are only six points out of the lead. Both are undefeated on the season.

Once beaten Kelly holds a slim two point edge over their only conqueror this season, the Notre Dame Bulldogs, who handed the Hawks the defeat in Cape Girardeau two weeks ago.

Class 4-A rivals, Cape Girardeau Central and Poplar Bluff, hold down the sixth and seventh positions in the ratings behind fifth place Neelyville. The Bengals and Mules have yet to see any action this season.

Another member of the New Madrid County league, Parma, holds down the eighth place in the ratings and is followed by undefeated Puxico. Parma lost to Scott Central in both teams season opener.

Advance, the defending poll champion, tied for 10th place with Scott Central. The Braves knocked off the Hornets to open the season and upset Parma before losing to East Prairie this week.

The ratings will be released Tuesday or Wednesday of each week throughout the season, with the final ratings coming after the completing of the state tournament.

As in the past, the Daily Standard will award the M. M. McMahon memorial "Number One" team award to the squad that finishes atop the final season ratings.

| | | |
|---|---|---|
| (1) Lilbourn (6) | 5-0 | 103 |
| (2) Matthews (3) | 3-0 | 97 |
| (3) Kelly (2) | 2-1 | 85 |
| (4) Notre Dame (1) | 2-0 | 83 |
| (5) Neelyville | 4-0 | 56 |
| (6) Cape Central (3) | 0-0 | 53 |
| (7) Poplar Bluff | 0-0 | 38 |
| (8) Parma | 3-1 | 27 |
| (9) Puxico | 3-0 | 25 |
| (10) Advance | 3-1 | 15 |
| Scott Central | 3-1 | 15 |

OUR BOYS WITH THE COLORS

BILOXI, Miss. — Technical Sergeant Loy D. Kidd, whose wife Noland is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. W. D. Fields of Steelville, Mo., has graduated at Keesler Air Force Base from the U.S. Air Force basic electronics principles course conducted by the Air Training Command.

Sgt. Kidd, who received instruction in communications and electronics systems principles, is remaining at Keesler for advanced training.

A 1959 graduate of Essex (Mo.) High School, the sergeant attended Southwest Missouri State University.

FT. HOOD, Tex. — Army Warrant Officer Steven S. Davis, 22, son of Mrs. Betty J. Stevens of 4411 Burington, St. Petersburg, Fla., is assigned to the 1st Cavalry Division at Ft. Hood.

U.S. FORCES, Germany — Army Staff Sgt. Gerald E. Kelley, son of Mr. and Mrs. James O. Kelley of 849 William St., Sikeston, Mo., participated with other American and allied troops Oct. 10-16 in Exercise Reforger V in Germany.

The Military Airlift Command flew approximately 11,000 U.S. - based soldiers and more than 1,000 tons of equipment to three different airfields in Germany in preparation for the event.

The exercise, conducted by the Joint Chiefs of Staff and NATO, focused on the procedures and techniques for receiving, equipping, assembling and employing units after they arrive, rather than on rapid deployment of troops from the United States.

Sgt. Kelley is regularly assigned with Headquarters Company, 1st Infantry Division at Goppingen, Germany.

The Sergeant's wife Patricia is with him in Germany.

Information exchange established

JEFFERSON CITY, Mo. (AP) — Missouri has joined seven other Midwestern states in establishing a network for exchanging information.

The highway patrol, since Nov. 1, has been hooked into a computer at the Missouri Department of Revenue and can send or receive information from a central computer in Springfield, Ill.

The Automated Law Enforcement Communications System (ALECS), involves Missouri, Illinois, Indiana, Iowa, Kentucky, Michigan, Ohio and Wisconsin.

Patrol spokesmen said it now takes less than five minutes, and sometimes less than one minute, to get a vehicle report from Indiana, for example.

The fastest service on the network has been from Kentucky, patrol employes say. In the past, it might have taken a half hour or so. The messages were sent via Teletype and the patrol in Indiana would have to obtain the records. Now they're all in computers.

The service has been extended to Kansas City and St. Louis police departments via the Missouri Uniform Law Enforcement System (MULES). Other agencies on the MULES network are indirectly hooked into ALECS via the highway patrol headquarters in Jefferson City.

It works like this, he said: If a St. Louis policeman wants to check on a car with a Kentucky license plate, he radios his dispatcher, who uses a computer keyboard to talk to the computer in Jefferson City.

The message can be forwarded quickly to the vehicle licensing agency in Kentucky, and the information will go back on the same route to the St. Louis dispatcher in a matter of seconds and be radioed to the trooper on the highway. If the information is on file in the Kentucky computer, no buttons have to be pushed by anyone except the one asking for the information.

The ALECS system is not used for all-points bulletins or descriptions on bank robbers, for example. It is used strictly to obtain information on auto registration and driver's licenses. This information from outside the ALECS network, say from New Mexico, still has to be obtained by Teletype, phone or the FBI's National Crime Information Center in Washington.

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

Daily Standard
Mr. Charles Blanton

We always wee so much bad news in the papers and on T-V today. I thought you might like the chance to print a story with a happy beginning, middle and end. The happy beginning is that the Gilkeston Jr. Woman's Club decided to raise money for the pediatrics ward by staging the "Red Stocking Follies." The happy ending is that we did raise a lot of money. But we didn't do it alone and that's where the happy middle comes in. Many people who are not members of our club worked very hard to raise this money. If I may use your media, I would like to thank these "stars" now.

The girls' kicklines practiced every morning for 2½ weeks. The club thanks Doris Jenkins, Kathy Gilmore, Ginger Fisher, Pat McDonald, and Karen Sherman. They made the Rockettes look like amateurs.

And, of course, to the real show stealers, the guys who sang & danced in our couples numbers. An affectionate thanks to Tom Nunnelee, Phil Tidwell Michael King, Eddie Aldrich, Robin Chambers, Tim Chambers, Sonny Alcorn, Eric Peil, Gary Pickett, Dan Norton and particularly, Rob Mitchell who drove to St. Louis after each performance for National Guards.

Our thanks to David Boyer and Mel Cokenour for the great work in the skits. Mel not only did a wonderful job in the production, but is the only reigning Maharajah in Sikeston.

And finally, a special thanks to Donny Freeman and Tony Heckemeyer. Danny was a fantastic performer and put in more time back stage than many knew.

Tony was our stage manager, our organizer, our friend — I really don't know what we'd have done without him.

All of the people helped make our happy story. We know they had fun, we all did. Look for us all in the next RED STOCKING FOLLIES — March 1975!

Sincerely,
Kay Fiel
Corres. Sec.

Book Review

YEVTUSHENKO'S READER
by Yevgeny Yevtushenko
Bard
189 pp.)

My grandfather came into the room. I had already undressed and was lying in bed. He sat down on the edge of my bed. He had in his hands a box of liqueur - filled chocolates. He offered me the box of chocolates and then pulled a bottle of vodka out of the pocket of his camel hair breeches.

"I want us to have a drink together," he said.

"You have the candy and I'll have the vodka."

"What shall we drink to?" I asked, trying hard to sound grownup.

"To the Revolution." he said.

I never saw my grandfather again. My mother told me that he had gone away for a long trip. I didn't know then that very night he had been arrested on a charge of high treason.

Poignant memories such as this one are part of A Precocious Autobiography, one of three sections in YEVTUSHENKO'S READER, a Bard book from Avon. Along with his autobiography, the Russian poet also presents The Spirit of Elbe, a discourse on the role of artists in uniting the USA and the USSR; and a collection of his most famous poems, including Babi Yar, Bombs for Balalaikas, and poems from White Snows Are Falling, Yevtushenko's latest book.

Battle Cry

50 m.p.h. speed limit: another Prohibition?

By Tom Tiede

NEW YORK — (NEA) — When the speed limit was reduced to 50 m.p.h. on New Jersey's highways early this month, a policeman stopped a truck driver going a flat-out 75. When the cop reminded the trucker of the energy crisis, the driver snapped: "The hell with the energy crisis, pal, I got a schedule to keep."

So goes the answer to the presidential plea for "some sacrifice by some Americans" during the worsening oil shortage. Authorities in several states report some general slowing down, on a volunteer basis, but, says a highway patrol officer in Pennsylvania, "I wouldn't say the response has been overwhelming."

By all measures, the response to sacrifice must be overwhelming if U.S. drivers are not to be slowed down by something other than speed limit modifications or volunteerism. Dick Rawley of the Federal Highway Administration says that automobiles account for 25 per cent of fuel oil consumption in the nation and stiffer regulations, if they come, will surely be in this oil use area.

There seems no doubt that significant gasoline savings are possible — and with a minimum of public suffering. Gulf Oil research and development engineers, for instance, say that late model engines traveling at 70 m.p.h. average 13.9 miles per gallon of gas vs. 19.6 miles for speeds of 40.

The Highway Administration is even more optimistic about slowdown savings. Thus Norbert Tiemann, the federal highway administrator, believes 50 m.p.h. speeds could reduce fuel use 5 per cent across the nation — enough to compensate for the current U.S. oil production shortfall.

Yet it's apparent there is opposition abuilding to the presidential call for lower speeds. The fact is only too obvious on the roads today. Though auto speed is as risky as it is wasteful (27 per cent of all fatal highway accidents are caused by excessive speed), though the National Safety Council says that a driver's chances of highway death double with each 10 m.p.h. increase in acceleration, Americans zip about with abandon. A recent check of a stretch of the New York Thruway indicated half the cars going in excess of 75; drivers in the rural highways of North Dakota go 90 and 95 without a care.

Some of the opposition to lower speeds, actually, is not real resistance but philosophic criticism. The American Automobile Association, while not objecting to reduced speeds, says that high speeds do not play the major statistical role in the excessive use of highway fuel. Kay Aldus of the AAA says studies indicate 75 per cent of all auto trips are 10 miles or less in distance, therefore "most people don't get up to 70 m.p.h."

The AAA believes that driver skill and mechanical excellence are far better guarantors of fuel economy. A Michigan AAA test indicates that poor driving habits — jackrabbit starts, uneven speeds and needless braking — can be responsible for as much as 44 per cent of vehicle fuel loss. The Minnesota AAA adds that its own studies indicate drivers can cut fuel use 25 per cent (plus save $100 a year in costs) with frequent engine tuneups.

But if the AAA wants mainly to supplement the call for reduced highway speeds, other organizations want only to condemn it. Bus industry spokesmen, as example, say most of their intercity vehicles are engineered for maximum efficiency at 65 m.p.h. Accordingly, says L.H. Warwick, vice president of Trailways: "If our buses run at 50, they'll be in third gear." Warwick's ironic conclusion is that buses use more gas at 50 than 65.

Then there are the truckers. Perhaps the most vocal of the reduced speed opponents. A spokesman for the American Trucking Association says the entire industry has been set up around the 65 m.p.h. speed limit. Terminals are thus far apart, safety regulations (maximum work time for drivers) are so balanced.

"We could live with a 60 m.p.h. limit, but 50 would destroy us," the spokesman says. "It would make one day's trip into two, it would upset everything." And so, adds a driver, angrily, "I don't see the need to slow down and, dammit, I ain't gonna do it."

No one knows for certain, but the belief is the latter opinion dominates the nation. Says a DOT official: "There is no way the American people are going to slow down easily." This official, then, believes the necessary slowdown must come hard:

"You have to hit people in the pocketbook. I believe gas will soon cost 75 cents a gallon, and it will probably be rationed, because that way a man has no choice — he goes slow or he goes broke or he runs out. It's the only way we can get through this period."

Perhaps it is the only way. Then again, the appeal to better judgments, without mandates, is still not dead. The same New Jersey cop who handled the rocketing, recalcitrant truck driver says he's also had to stop an increasing number of people for going too slow! "One lady was doing 25 on the Turnpike. When I told her to go faster she looked at me as if I was unpatriotic."

Triglycerides aren't cholesterol

By Lawrence E. Lamb, M.D.

DEAR DR. LAMB — My doctor says I have triglycerides in my blood. I never heard of it before. What is the difference between triglycerides and cholesterol? I try to keep my weight down and not use too much fats. Please tell me what to do. My old doctor would have explained and told me more, but he left, and I had to get another doctor. He doesn't tell me anything. I'm not afraid to know what is wrong.

DEAR READER — Triglycerides is a scientific name for fats. Most of the fat in our bodies, and that we eat, is in this form. What your doctor is telling you is that you have too much fat in your blood.

Cholesterol is not actually a fat, although it is a waxy material. It is formed by the liver. The liver can make it from too many calories of any type, including carbohydrates and even proteins. Whenever you eat more calories than your body uses, there is a probability that your liver will form excess amounts of cholesterol. You can also get more cholesterol from the food you eat. Egg yolks and organ meats are the most common foods that contain lots of cholesterol.

The cholesterol with the fat forms small particles that can be deposited in the wall of arteries causing atherosclerosis, which leads to heart attacks, strokes, and other problems.

Some people require special care to help control their blood fats and cholesterol. The majority, however, can do much better by decreasing their body fat. This means decreasing the number of calories eaten and increasing physical activity.

You are wise to limit the fat in your diet. You might make a point to include more poultry and fish in your diet and less mammal meat if you tend to use lots of it. You can also use low fat dairy products, such as fortified skim milk and uncreamed cottage cheese. Prepare your foods using corn oil or safflower oil at home. Limit the fatty salad dressings and the fat, high calorie desserts.

And a word about your new doctor. He would probably enjoy talking to you more. Most doctors actually did go into medicine because they enjoy doing things for people. The problem often is that they simply can't. The modern medical system has forced each doctor to see a lot of patients just to keep the office open. I sometimes think doctors have to see too many patients. But, a busy doctor with lots of responsibility can't take the time to explain all about foods and living patterns. If he did, he wouldn't be able to see all of the patients that need to see him. This is too bad because some of these aspects of health care are very important factors in how people get along with their problems. This is why I think we must try to do more to help people help themselves.

Increasing a doctor's responsibility to see more and more patients, even with the aid of computers, new office management, and new expensive equipment is not going to make it any easier for him to have the time to explain a lot or spend much time with each of his patients.

Cooking With Flair--for winter

With holiday entertaining gaining momentum, it's a joy to discover a congenial dessert; one that's easy to prepare and a winner for you, the hostess. Above all, convenience and versatility in foods is a major interest during the holiday rush. This is where Lemon Cloud Pie enters the scene as the perfect compliment to meals.

A tart, refreshing flavor combines with a light texture-- as light as the name "cloud" implies. Even after the most progressive feasting from appetizer through main course, this unique fluffy pie is a pleasant conclusion.

LEMON CLOUD PIE

1 envelope unflavored gelatin
3/4 cup sugar
1/4 teaspoon salt
1 cup water
1/3 cup lemon juice
2 egg yolks, slightly beaten
1- 1/2 teaspoons grated lemon rind
2 cups (or one 4 1/2- oz. container) frozen whipped topping, thawed
1 baked 9- inch pie shell, cooled

Mix gelatin, sugar, and salt in saucepan. Add water and lemon juice. Blend in egg yolks. Place over medium heat and cook, stirring constantly, until gelatin is dissolved--- about five minutes. Remove from heat and add lemon rind.

Chill until slightly thickened.

Place bowl of gelatin in larger bowl of ice and water. Whip with electric mixer or rotary beater until about double in volume.

Blend in 1 1/2 cups of the whipped topping; pour into pie shell. Chill until firm-- 3 to 4 hours. Garnish with remaining whipped topping and a slice of lemon, if desired.

Even Scrooge turned sweet on Christmas day, and our guess is that Mrs. Cratchit helped turn the tide with a special gift-- her own candies-- all wrapped and earmarked for Ebenezer.

Sweets for the sweet is a Christmas tradition. Opera Fudge, Chocolate Creams and Chocolate Circus are wonderful contents for surprise Christmas gifts. All three are made with semi-sweet chocolate.

Have the youngsters help both with the candy- making and the wrappings. Expect some sampling before the packages are ready-- you'll all be sweeter for it!

A Holiday Crown

Holidays may be hectic and especially so when you're entertaining. There may be peace on earth, but there's little to be found in the kitchen around Christmas.

Faced with a round of company holiday dinners, wouldn't it be a timesaver to have a make- ahead dessert-- an impressive one that wouldn't require mastering the art of French cooking in order to create? It's easy when you start with fresh fruit- flavor gelatin and your favorite mold.

Here's the dessert you had in mind. What's more, Christmas colors of pale frosty green and shimmering red contrast to add extra sparkle to your table and to your reputation as a great hostess.

HOLIDAY CROWN

1 package (6 oz.) or 2 packages (3 oz. each) strawberry flavor gelatin
2 cups boiling water
1 1/2 cups cold water
1 package (6 oz.) or 2 packages (3 oz. each) lime flavor gelatin
1/2 cup sugar
2 cups boiling water
1 cup cold water
1 envelope whipped topping mix
*Or use any other red flavor.

Dissolve red flavor gelatin in two cups boiling water. Add 1 1/2 cups cold water. Pour into an eight- cup mold. Chill until set, but not firm.

Meanwhile, dissolve lime flavor gelatin and sugar in two cups boiling water. Add one cup cold water. Chill until slightly thickened.

Chill until firm-- at least six hours or overnight. Unmold. Garnish with fresh mint or holly leaves and whole cranberries around base, if desired. Makes about eight cups or 12 servings.

Coffee Corner by Cherie

I could swear it hasn't been six months ago that I took down the Christmas tree, and here it is that time again. How fast time flys! I look at Lee and Brete, already half grown, and it seems as though only yesterday they were crawling about on the floor and eagerly awaiting the arrival of Santa Claus. Now, all too soon, Lee is taller than I am, and Santa Claus has long since ceased to slide down our chimney and surprise us with toys on Christmas morning. I find that tucked away amidst all the gaiety and frivolity of this holiday season there is a little sadness now, for too quickly there will be no one under foot driving me crazy with last minute shopping, and cooking, and things to do. Too - too soon they're up and gone and all that's left is the echo of Christmases gone by —

Where did they go
All those years
When did they pass?
We were so young
You and I
They went so fast.
It seems like only yesterday
That we first met
Now here it is tomorrow
And you've filled my heart with sorrow
Where did they go
All those years
We had such fun.
We made such plans
You and I
That never got done.
Our schemes were oh, so grand
The ones we made
Our dreams were full of hope
When did they fade?
Where did they go
All those years
They went so fast
We were so young
You and I
When did they pass.

Head of Teachers College to speak

CAPE GIRARDEAU — The president of one of the most prestigious teacher education institutions in the United States will help Southeast Missouri State University celebrate its centennial early next month.

Dr. John H. Fischer, president of Teachers College at Columbia University in New York City, will speak at a special convocation on the campus Dec. 3.

It was Dec. 3, 1873, that the first classes were held by Southeast Missouri Normal School, an institution create d in the spring of that year by an act of the Missouri General Assembly. Fifty- seven students were on hand.

Today Southeast Missouri State is a university with an all-time high enrollment of 7,669. It offers 12 undergraduate degrees and five graduate degrees, and a student can select from 91 different areas of concentration, including five certificate programs and 15 pre- professional programs.

Teacher education continues to be an important area of emphasis, however, as it has been throughout the university's history, and this is one reason that an outstanding professional educator was chosen to speak on the 100th anniversary of the first day of classes, according to university officials.

The convocation marking the first day of classes will begin at 11 a.m. in the auditorium of Academic Hall, the university's administration building and one of the oldest structures on the campus.

Academic Hall was opened in 1906. It was built to replace the first campus structure, known as the Old Normal Building, which burned in 1902.

Dr. Fischer was born in Baltimore, and he began his professional career there in 1930, serving in several teaching and administrative posts before becoming superintendent of public instruction in 1953. He was appointed a professor of education and dean of Teachers College, Columbia University, in 1959. He became president in 1962.

The educator is currently a member of the boards of Boy Scouts of America, Center for Urban Education, Metropolitan Applied Research Center, New York Foundation, the Institute for Educational Development, Cowles communications Inc. and New York Life Fund Inc.

He has been active in numerous other professional and civic organizations and has served as president of the Maryland State Teachers Association, the Prisoners Aid Association of Maryland and the Baltimore council of Social Agencies. He has also been chairman of the board of trustees of the Educational Testing Service and a member of the Peace Corps Advisory Council.

In 1963, Dr. Fischer was chairman of the United States delegation to the International Conference on Public Education in Geneva, Switzerland, and was chairman of the U.S. delegation to the UNESCO Conference on Youth at Grenoble, France, in 1964.

MIRVing makes talks not worth their salt

WASHINGTON (NEA)

The basic flimsiness of the SALT I U.S.-Soviet disarmament agreement has always been the strongest reason to doubt whether the much advertised detente between the two nations had much real substance.

This is offered to put in perspective the arguments that our recent worldwide military alert at a tight moment in the Middle East war called the depth of detente into question.

Aside from trade approaches clearly much desired by Moscow, SALT I has been the key concrete achievement used to rebut skeptics who argued that detente up to now has been mostly a tossing off of toasts beneath tinkling chandeliers.

SALT I was hailed because it narrowly limited development and deployment of ABM missile defense systems, and also fixed the number of missiles each country could maintain. The Soviet Union was given a numerical and percentage advantage in this accord, on the theory it was necessary to balance the acknowledged greater sophistication of our missile weaponry — especially that in our Polaris-Poseidon submarine fleet.

The joker, of course, was that no limit was placed upon the number of warheads which could be dispatched in a given nuclear missile. Since we were already deploying missiles with multiple, independently-targeted warheads (each missile on a Poseidon vessel has at least 10 warheads), the Russians wanted no ceiling so they'd have a chance to play catch-up.

Yet we, too, saw the advantage of racing on with the multiples (MIRVs). One expert estimates that we will have roughly 10,000 nuclear warheads by mid-1975, and we will not yet be into the era of the new-generation submarine Trident, whose larger, more numerous missiles may carry from 20 to 24 warheads apiece.

Despite our acknowledged advances, we got pretty exercised this summer when we verified that Russia was testing MIRVs on one of its giant, land-based nuclear missiles.

The newest round of SALT conversations is supposed to get around to putting some check on all this. Still, the guessing has to be that agreement will come slowly. Both sides will be rushing to commit themselves irreversibly to MIRVing programs that would have to be accepted as a foundation for any limitations agreement.

The trouble is, as specialist Herbert F. York writes in the November Scientific American, that MIRVing has a whole host of attractions for a major nuclear power.

A missile with many warheads independently targeted is a cheaper device, if the goal is to hit many targets, than a whole array of single weapons separately propelled.

In York's view, sending off a MIRVed weapon which later dispatches several warheads to widely separated points actually goes beyond confusing an enemy's defense and exhausts its capacity to cope adequately with the attack.

If this is truly so, then limitations on ABM's seem generally irrelevant, which casts SALT I in a weakened light and makes the long U.S. fuss over ABM a rather fruitless exercise. York in his article says as much, indicating agreement on ABM limits might not have been attained had there not been what amounts to a MIRV escape clause (the issue is omitted.)

The impression President Nixon sought to convey with SALT I was that we and the world are safer for it. But it is hard to disagree with the contention of York and many others that MIRVing, still open-ended, introduces a crucial element of instability into the nuclear equation.

Prison desegration should not be rushed

JEFFERSON CITY, Mo. (AP) — They sat around a long table in a sweltering room. Whites on one side, blacks on the other. All are convicted criminals — murderers, robbers and burglars.

They have met into the night, sometimes with state corrections officials, trying to figure a way to live together behind the walls of the Missouri Penitentiary.

They are two dozen men, half representing the 800 white prisoners and half representing the 700 or so black prisoners. The century-old penitentiary has six cell halls. Three are occupied solely by whites and three are occupied only by blacks.

That situation doesn't even exist now in Louisiana, Mississippi and Alabama, Quinlan Shea, a lawyer with the Civil Rights division of the U.S. Justice Department, said Tuesday night.

"Everybody's heard about desegration of restaurants and schools, but it also applies to jails," Shea said, telling the prisoners the Civil Rights Act requires desegregation.

Inmate resistance has stalled desegregation efforts at the prison since an attempt to integrate F Hall resulted in a riot, in which a black inmate was stabbed to death, in 1964.

Tensions have been building in the latest attempts to integrate. The highway patrol was alerted last Friday when a rumor circulated that the metal factory, where the state's license plates are made, would be burned down. Nozzles had been removed from fire hoses and paint thinner was stolen.

Monday, after an all-night meeting among inmates, newsmen and corrections officials, three small fires were set but caused little damage.

The negotiation session continued Monday night and George Camp, the 34-year-old corrections chief who came here in July from the New York City corrections system, said he would lift the Friday deadline for voluntary integration if the inmate council could come up with an acceptable plan by Thursday.

Tuesday morning, there was a suspected escape. A prisoner disappeared but officials thought he might be hiding in the penitentiary.

The state's medium security facilities and the prison farms have been desegregated. Camp saved the worst for last. Two weeks ago notices appeared on bulletin boards saying desegregation would begin Nov. 30 and be completed Dec. 15.

"It's not a question of whether we will have integration, but when," Camp said Monday night. "As long as this situation exists, I'm in noncompliance with the law."

While no federal funds have been withheld, Camp said they could be if desegregation were not achieved.

Shea said his fellow attorneys in Washington had nagged him about taking care of the Missouri problem, but he said he convinced the Justice Department to delay in filing a federal suit drawn up last January because Camp and the administration of Gov. Christopher S. Bond wanted a chance to achieve integration voluntarily.

"A court order would be the easiest way out," Shea told the inmates. "But we don't want to have to force desegregation upon you."

"We're for integration, but on a two-week program?" asked Ron Hoelzer, a member of the white inmate council. "We think it's too hazardous to suddenly ship out 50 guys from a hall."

"That's usually the first line of defense," Shea said. "A pilot program would just postpone the inevitable."

White inmates said they would try to prevent violence but had been told the whites would just sit on their bunks and not to go to work if the integration order came.

"Let there be a firm understanding," said Charles Franklin, representing the black inmates. "We will comply. There is no hostility on the part of blacks. We just want to be assured it will be on a 50-50 basis so we can protect ourselves."

The main resistance was in C Hall, which has more than 200 whites, some of whom have been in prison 30 years. Other white cellblocks have agreed to exchange inmates on a 50-50 basis.

Shea said the Justice Department would be satisfied to have desegregation on a basis approaching the population ratio of 52 per cent white, 48 per cent black.

"This is blown all out of proportion," said Richard Stiles, a black from Kansas City who has been in the prison 15 years. "They could do it overnight. All you have to do is pick up and move."

He conceded that many whites would even accept integration of two-man cells, but said "too many don't want a black as a next-door neighbor.

Black and white inmates work together, eat together and watch movies together without any problems, he said.

Asked why they resisted, one white council member said, "You know about the suit at Moberly? That's what they're afraid of."

Earlier this year at the Moberly Training Center for Men, a group of white inmates filed suit, charging that guards allowed blacks to rape and physically abuse young white inmates.

The blacks, on the other hand, say such statements are inflammatory and only worsen the problem.

"If there is any violence, it won't be started by blacks," several black inmates told newsmen.

"Integration is not our main problem," one black said. "Our problem is to get parole and get out of here."

Both sides have taken advantage of the issue to make their grievances known.

The whites want the release of a half dozen whites put in maximum security when they were suspected of causing trouble. The blacks want more black guards. Camp said release of the troublemakers would be up to Associate Warden Donald Wyrick. Warden Harold Swenson has been on sick leave. Camp noted he has hired 10 more black guards since he has been here and will hire four more. Previously, only 2 per cent of the prison staff was black.

Nearly all the inmate council members—white and black— commended Camp for his cooperation in letting them work out their own problems without using force and appreciate his strong views on rehabilitation and improving the corrections system.

The corrections chief has publicly stated he is against the death penalty. He has worked to get higher pay for guards—they start at $448 a month—and for inmate work. The $1 per day limit for prison work has been lifted, but no extra money has been appropriated by the legislature.

Comet now visible to Missourians

Dr. Senne is professor of civil engineering and chairman of that department at UMR and his hobby is astronomy. For a number of years he has provided timetables to Missouri newspapers listing dates and times various satellites can be seen passing over the state.

Dr. Senne says that by Dec. 15, Kohoutek will be a very bright object in the pre-dawn sky. And from that time until Dec. 28, when it will pass behind the sun, those looking for the comet after the sun is up should be very careful not to look directly at the sun.

This comet was initially discovered on March 7 of this year when it was an extremely faint object 368 million miles from the earth. Since that time it has grown steadily brighter as it speeds toward the sun. It is presently within 163 million miles of the earth.

Kohoutek will probably be the most studied comet in history, according to Dr. Senne. Involved in this work will be most major observatories, amateur astronomers, Skylab 3 and Mariner 10 (the newly launched spacecraft now speeding toward the planets Venus and Mercury).

At UMR, a group of physics students plans to make a photographic record of the comet's passage. Members of the Astronomy Club will use various filters when making the photographs in an attempt to determine the spectral content of the comet's emmission.

"There are generally three parts to a comet," Dr. Senne says. "The nucleus, which may be several miles in diameter, is composed of frozen gases, ices and rocky material. The coma is a halo of gases surrounding the nucleus and, in the case of Kohoutek, may measure 100,000 miles or more in size. The tail of a comet is made up of very tenuous gas which is forced away from the direction of the sun by solar radiation pressure and the solar wind. Comet tails vary in length but may reach lengths of over 80 million miles.

"Most comets are associated with the solar system. And since they spend so much time beyond the planets, they may represent material which has remained unchanged since the formation of the solar system," he concludes.

Some of the recent bright comets have been Arend-Roland (1957), Mrkos (1957), Ikeya-Seki (1965) and Bennett (1970). The famous Halley's comet, which was visible in 1910, is scheduled to return in 1986.

Elsberry named Mo. GOP executive director

JEFFERSON CITY, Mo. (AP) — Clair W. Elsberry, 37, Trenton, Mo., took over the Jefferson City headquarters of the state Republican party Monday as the party's new executive director.

Reed was paid $9,300 a year. Elsberry's salary was not divulged.

Elsberry, who grew up in Madison, Mo., is married and has five teen-agers.

Elsberry worked for the state Highway Department in Macon, Moberly and Trenton for 17 years and last year served as Trenton city engineer.

He has been active in the Missouri Jaycees since 1968 and in June of 1970 was honored as one of the outstanding Jaycees in the nation. In February of 1971 he was honored as one of Missouri's five outstanding young men.

Elsberry said his job would include organization, communications and assisting in fundraising.
